ARGOSY

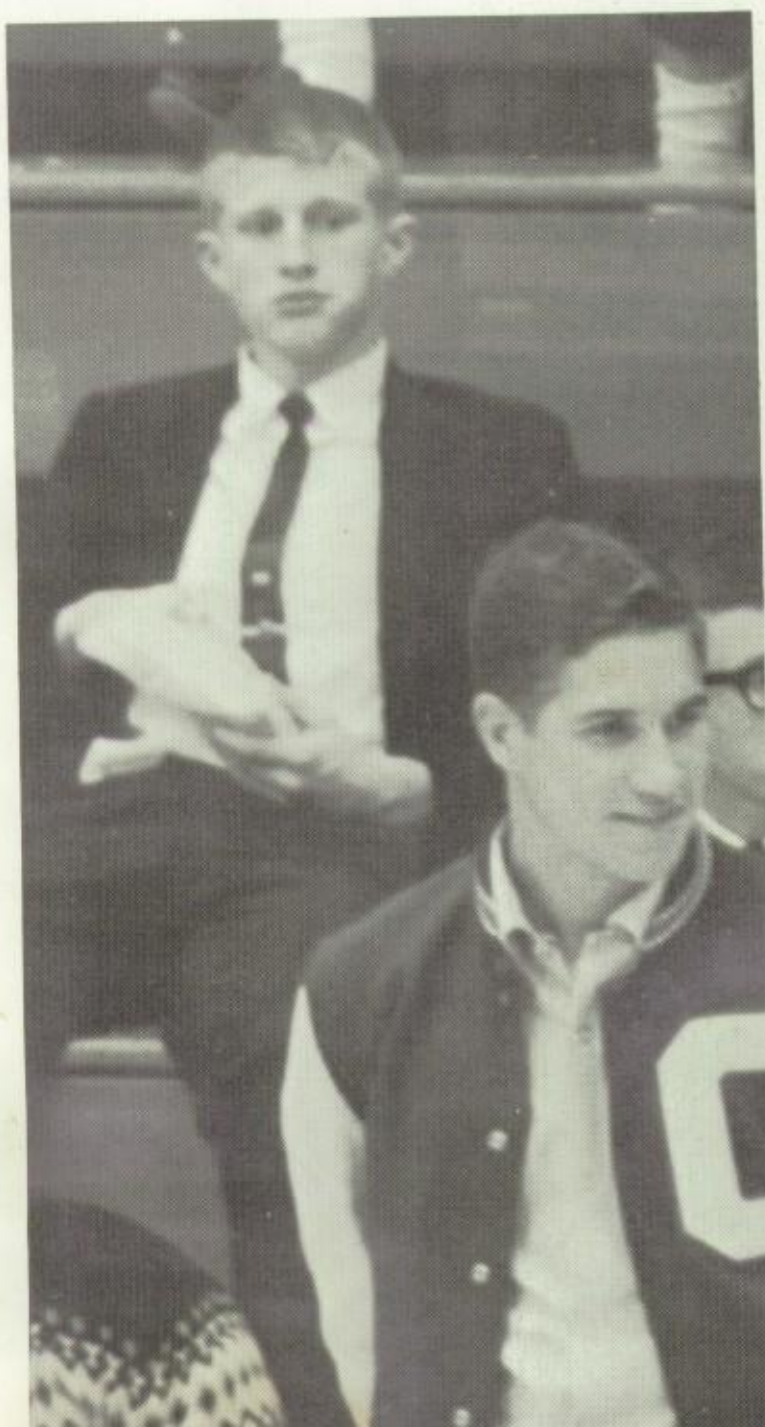

CARROLL HIGH SCHOOL

FLORA, INDIANA
VOLUME 5

"Silhouettes" seems a fitting theme for this year's Argosy. Silhouettes outline persons, animals or inanimate objects. This year's Argosy is like a silhouette because it outlines the year's activities. In a silhouette the most prominent features are recognized, and the yearbook, too, records the most outstanding features in school life. There is much left out in a silhouette, but this is filled in by the imagination of the viewer. Likewise, there is much background behind many of the pictures in the yearbook, and this is left to the memory of the students. Just as silhouettes usually portray an atmosphere of stillness and serenity, so the yearbook marks a ceasing of the rush of school and a realization that another year has passed into the background.

Some of the things that made up part of school life were the dances held by the various organizations and the ballots that had to be counted to determine kings and queens. Much equipment had to be gotten ready for the various sports along with the concessions that provided refreshments during half-times. Then it was back to the cheers that lead the teams to victory. Lunch tickets, absent slips, pencils, tablets, and erasers made the book store a busy place, as well as the library which was a source of information for the reports due next period. Many hours of planning were spent to make the popular senior cords a true work of art.

A girl's basketball game was sponsored by the Sunshine Society. The teams represented the various classes and Paul Sibray was chosen Basketball King by the student body.

Even though basketball is a boy's sport some femininity managed to persist throughout the game.

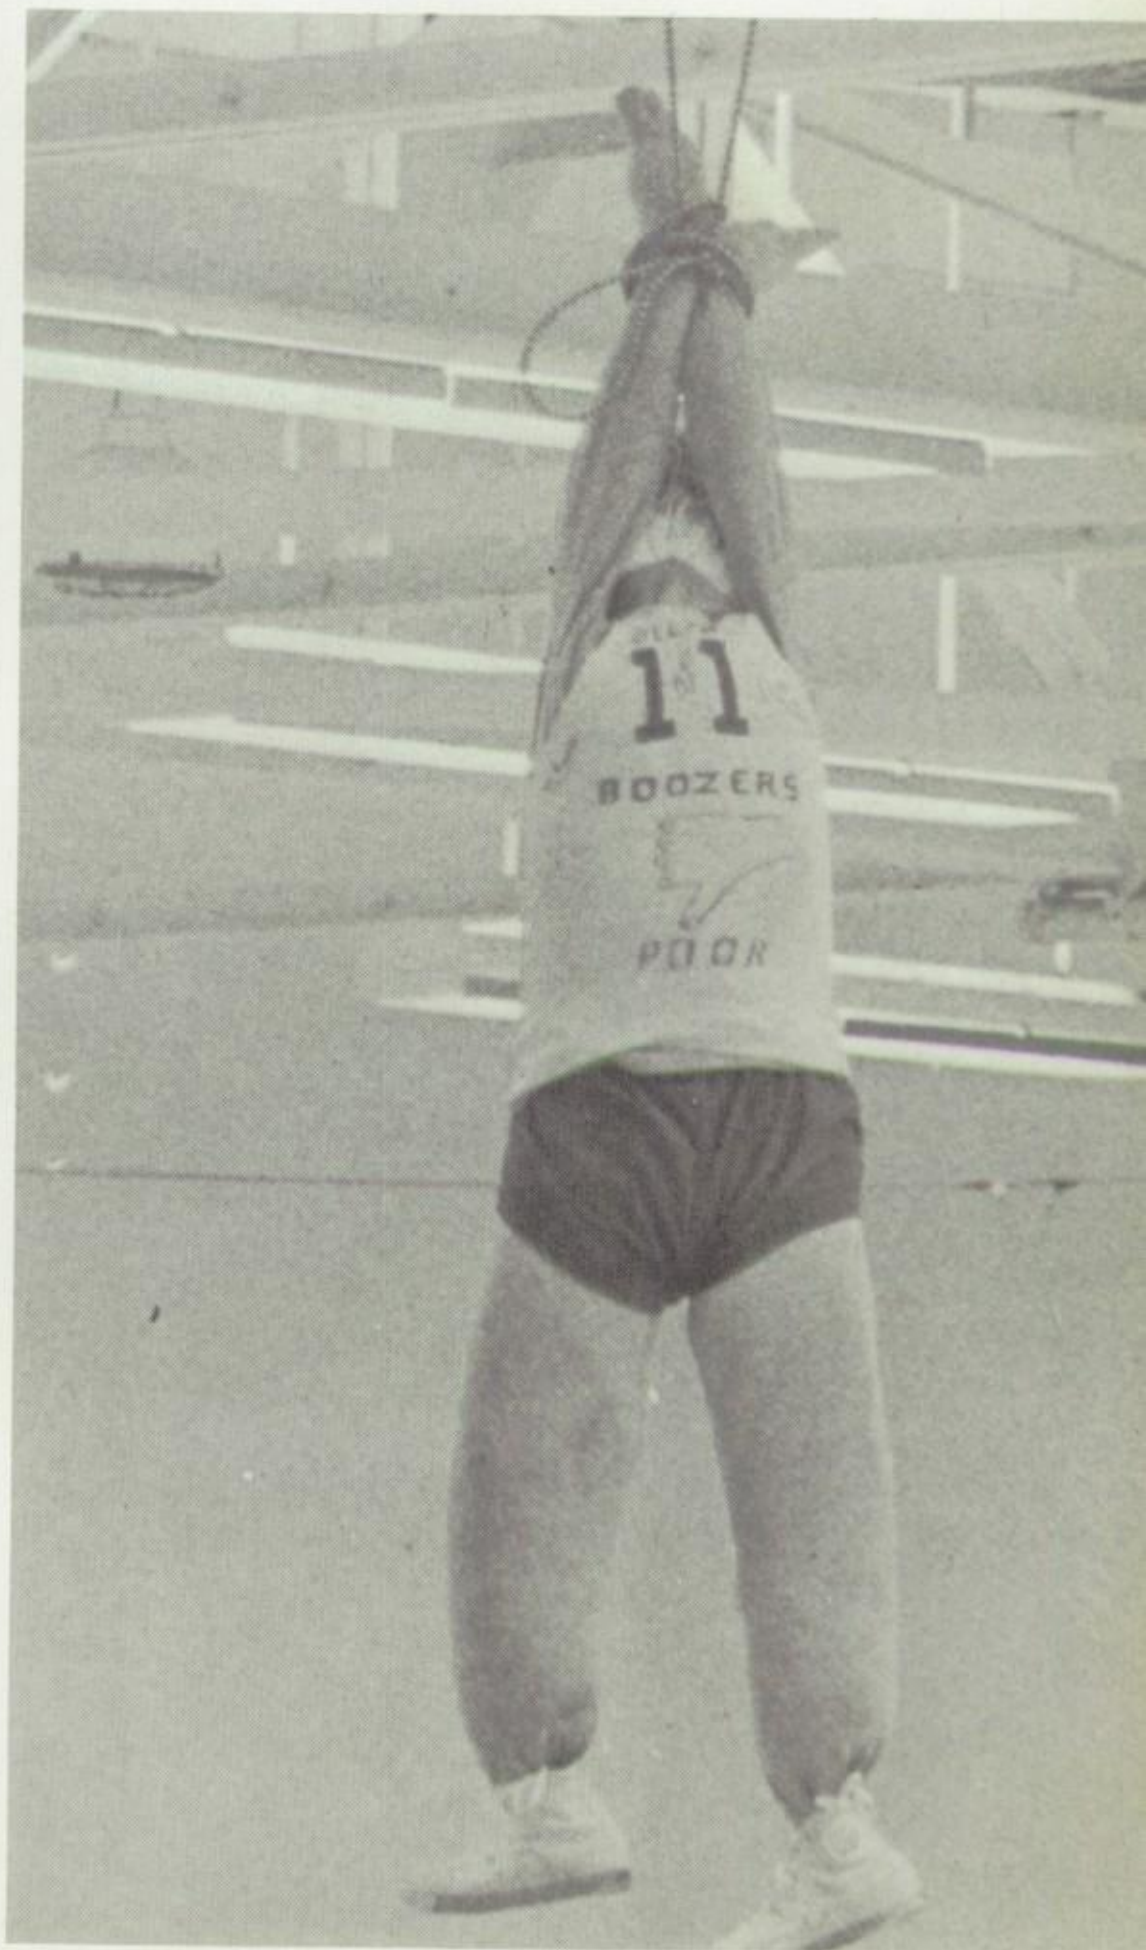

Cheerleaders, representing their team, dressed to fit the occasion and yelled to urge on their team.

Convocations of various kinds were presented by the student council. The students not only enjoyed them but more than once were asked to participate.

Among the Convocations, Alan Stewart, professional archer; a professional gymnast; "Mary Poppins", a member of the Ruth Smith dancers, were featured.

An "Oracle" is shown hanging from the rafters. He was later the center of attraction at a pep session before the Delphi game.

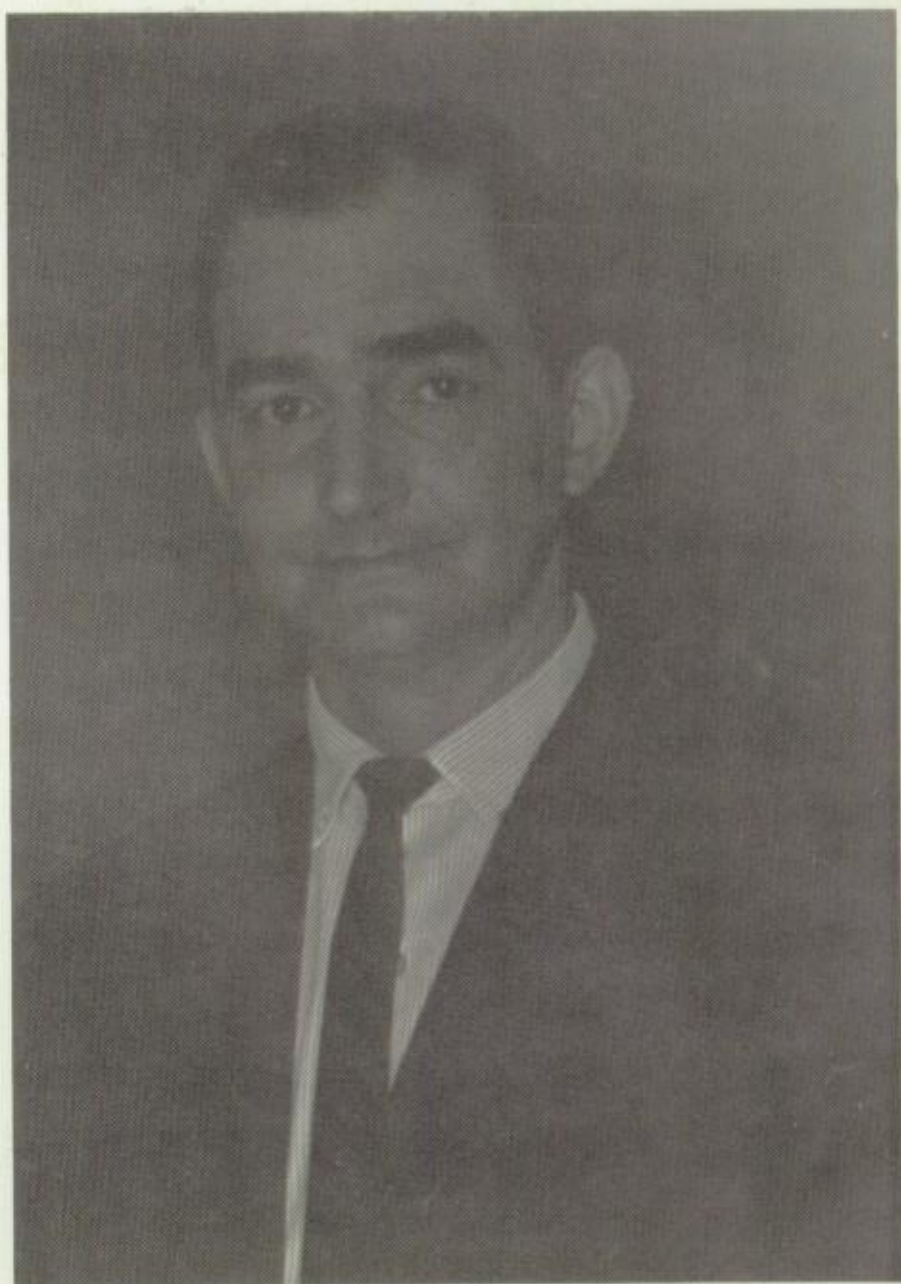

Junior Class presented the drama, "Diary of Anne Frank", a story about a Jewish family that was persecuted during World War II. Members of the cast were P. Hutson, J. Myer, D. Cosby, S. Hardy, B. Koups, C. Segraves, A. Parman, M. Beckner, K. Butcher, T. Bixler. Student directors were K. Martin and D. Herndon.

"The Curious Savage," a mystery-comedy which takes place in an insane asylum, was presented by the Senior Class in April. Sheryl Allen played the leading part of an old lady who kept her step-children guessing where she hid her valuable bonds. Other members of the cast were Judy Berkshire, Sally Pickart, Dan Wilson, Ben Moore, Dick Fisher, Gaye Martin, Jane Wilson, Steve Jordan, Chuck Stiles, Rosemary Mylet and Brian Hardy. Ann Davis and Jennie Shambaugh were student directors. Mrs. Robert Rieffel was play director and Mr. Rieffel, technical director of both Junior and Senior Class Plays.

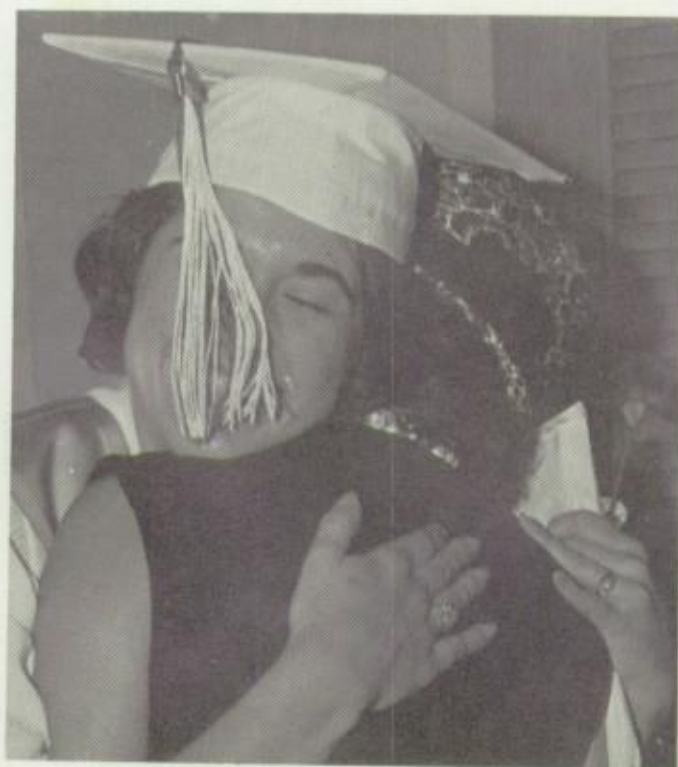

Guidance counselors, Mrs. Douglas, with the aid of her secretary, Mrs. Allbaugh and Mr. Rector, helped students with their class schedules, interpreting of tests, and any other problems. Mr. Rector was also busy as assistant principal as well as teacher.

Another giver of advice was Mrs. Jim Davis, school nurse. Besides providing medical help, she also checked on school attendance.

With the proper guidance from teachers and parents, and self-discipline the Class-of-66 finally reached its goal. All in one busy weekend seniors danced to prom music, graduated and received gifts.

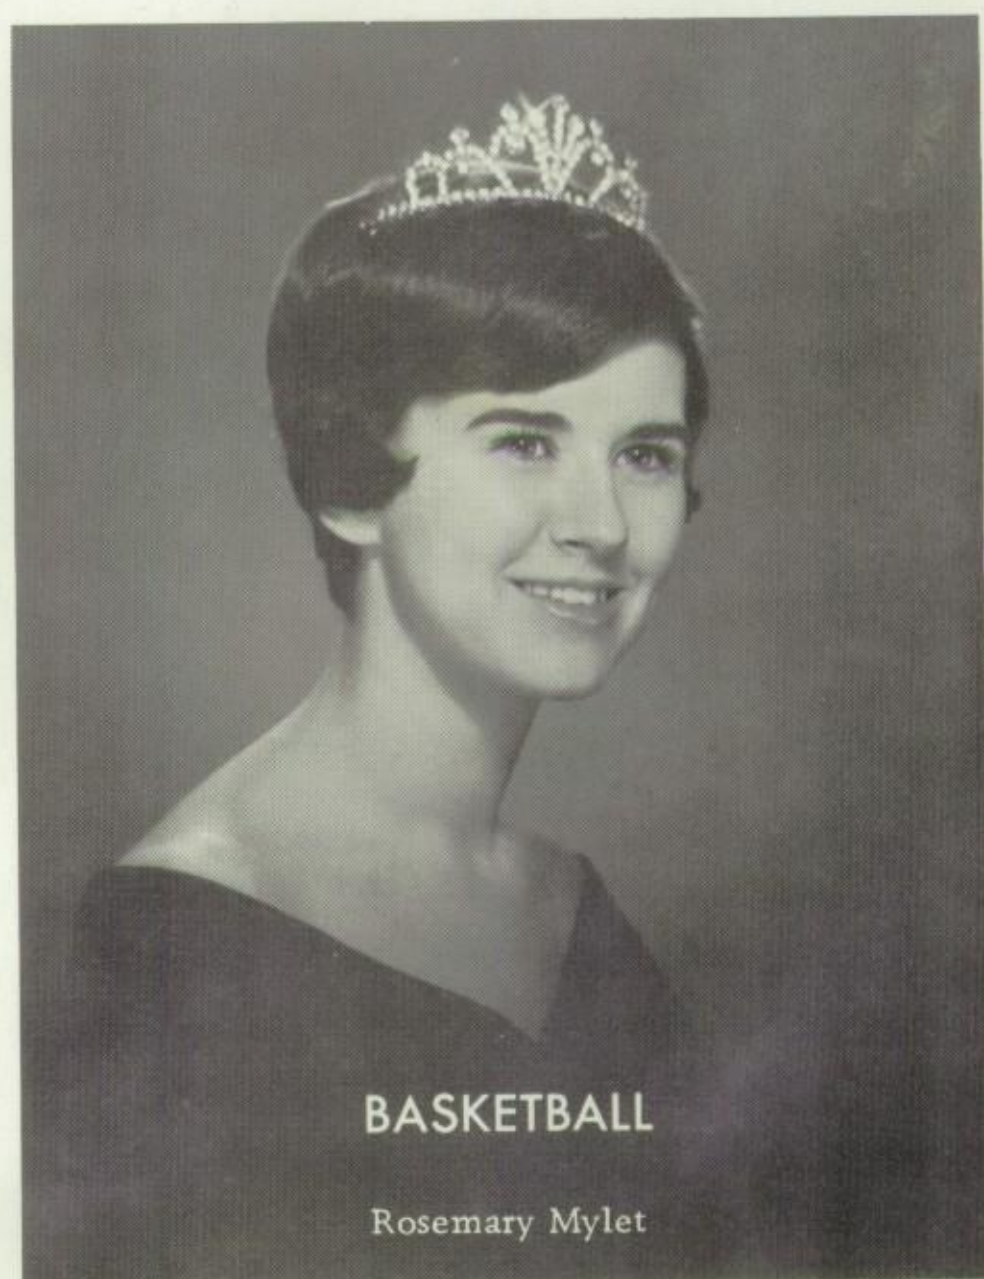

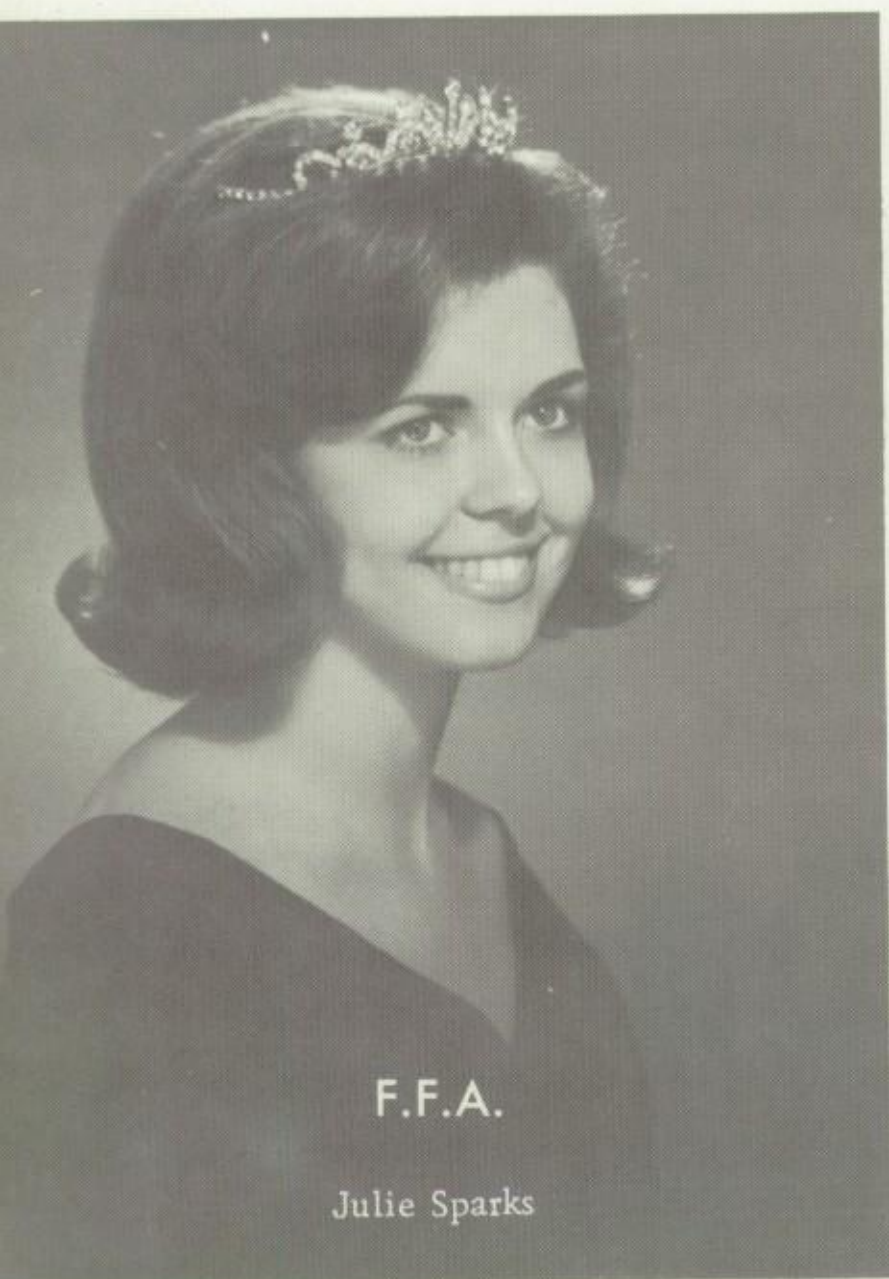

Prom and graduation marked the climax of the seniors 12 years of school. Mike Bishop and Toni Short were crowned King and Queen at the prom "Isle of Dreams". The Four Dukes provided music.

Graduation was both a happy and sad occasion for the seniors. Receiving their diplomas and congratulations from Mr. Ireland was the highpoint of the evening for the graduates. Those receiving special Awards were Jennifer Shambaugh, valedictorian; Ann Davis, salutatorian and Sally Pickart, Carroll Honor Award winner. The class was especially privileged to have the Honorable Birch E. Bayh, Jr. as their speaker.

ACADEMICS

English 9 and 10 Are Stepping Stones.

English 9 and 10 prepare students for studying higher English. Here they receive the fundamentals of grammar and a general knowledge of literature. As freshmen, the students study the construction of short stories, novels, nonfiction, light poetry and drama. Sophomores' studies are in the same categories but more comprehensive.

Higher English Emphasizes Literature

English 11 and 12 narrow the fields of literature down to American and English literature. Grammar is still studied in English 11 but more as a review. In studying American literature, juniors learn styles of writing.

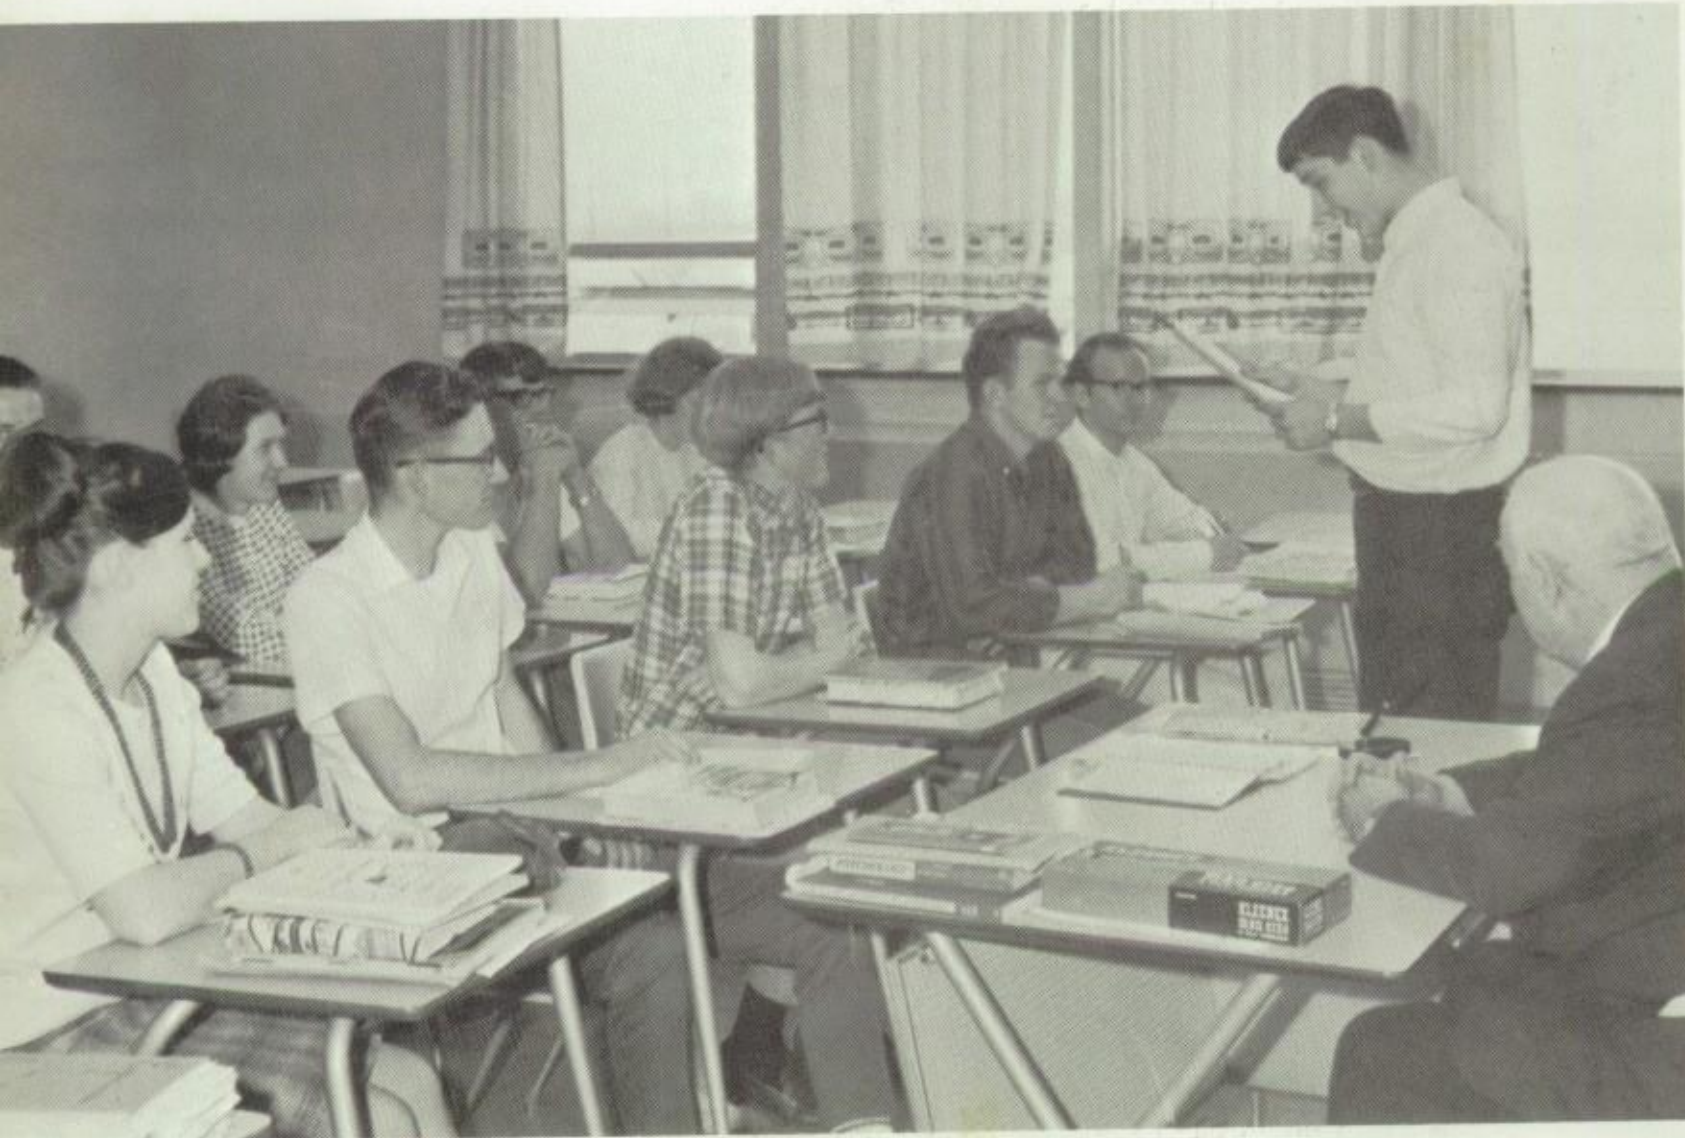

College preparatory English classes focus most of their studying on English literature. This differs from the English 12 classes in that their studies include both grammar and literature. For variety, members of the C.P. class gave oral reports on English authors and their writings. Near the end of school, the class took advantage of an opportunity to rest while the teacher was out of the room. (pictured above)

U. S. History and Gov't Teach Patriotism.

U. S. history and government classes helped to make students better citizens. History taught the ideals and goals of our forefathers and the changes that have taken place in our country's policies toward ourselves and the rest of the world.

Government was concerned with studying how the local, state, and national governments function. Mr. Puett encouraged his students to take an active part in government and be concerned with its policies.

Economics and Psychology Are New.

Mike Humphrey talks to Mr. Puett about a psychology problem.

Economics and psychology were two new subjects added to the curriculum this year. Teachers, Mr. Rector and Mr. Puett, found one semester per class passed quickly. A field trip to the Logansport State Hospital was taken as a supplement to the first semester psychology class.

Many problems in economics class were thought provoking.

World History and Geography Classes Study Past and Present Civilizations.

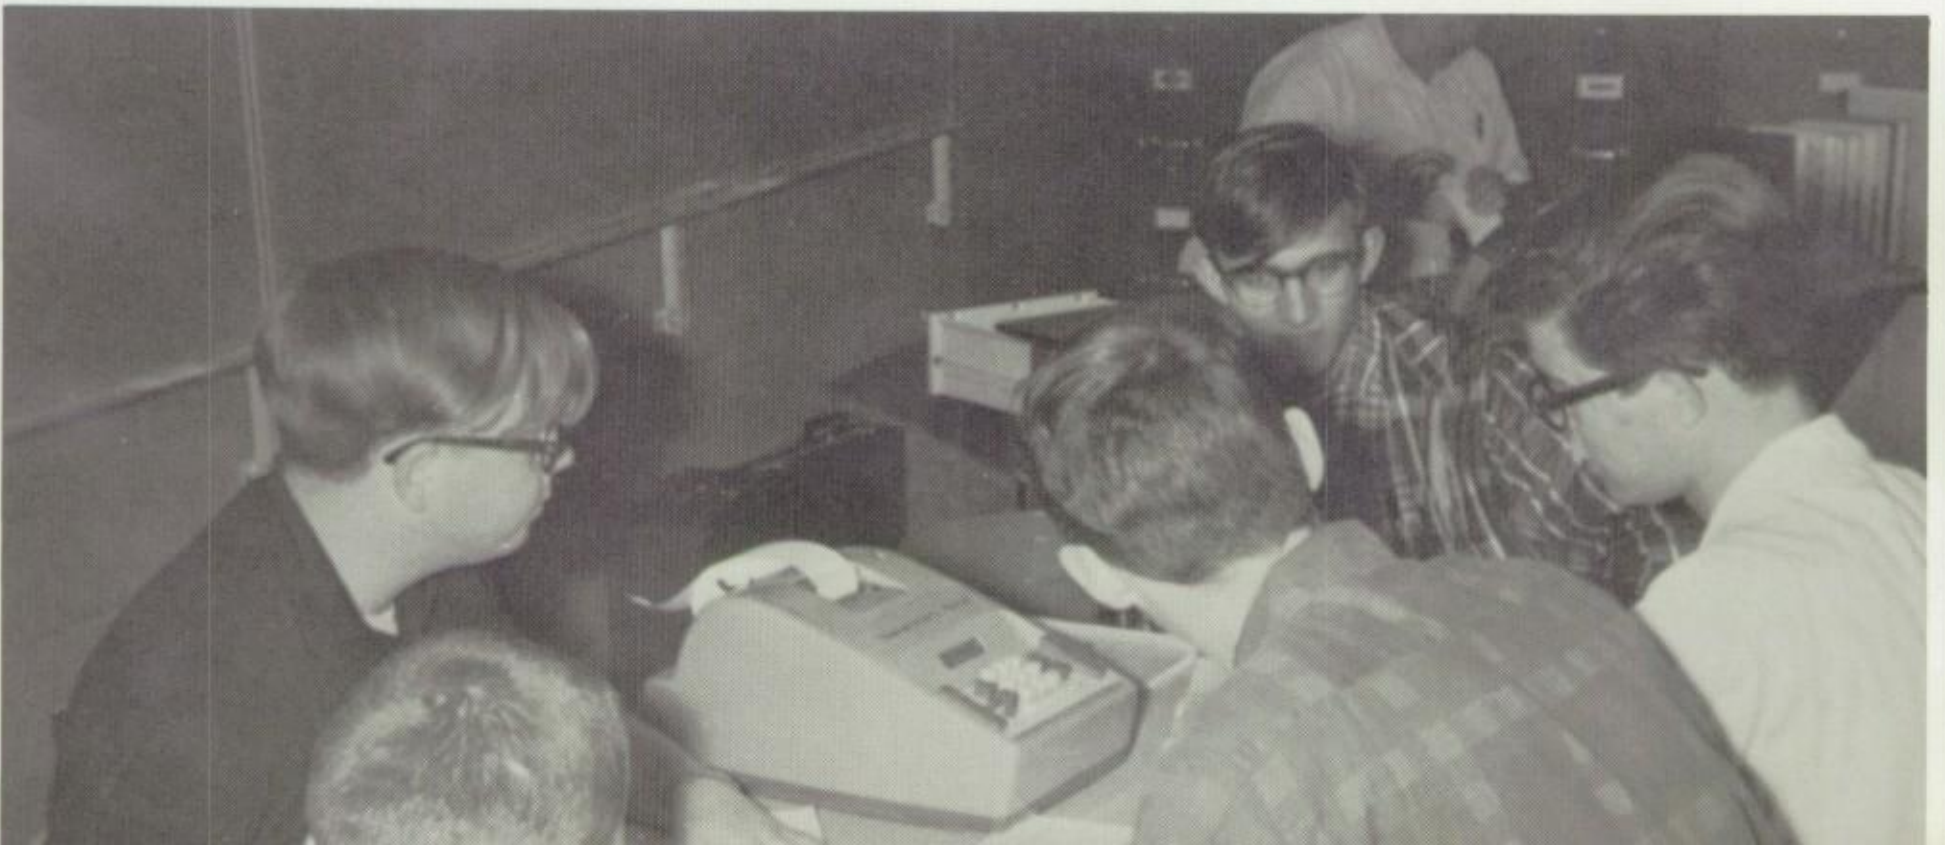

World History and geography classes acquaint students with other countries and civilizations. By learning about the social, political and economic status of countries as well as the topography, climate and history, students can better understand problems the countries have. Many of these problems also apply to domestic situations.

Agriculture Classes Are Beneficial to Both Students and Adults.

Agriculture classes gave students practical information on farming. They got first hand experience by doing practice farm account records. For those who intend to become farmers, facts learned about farm enterprises will also prove helpful. Tractor maintenance was another area of study which students found beneficial.

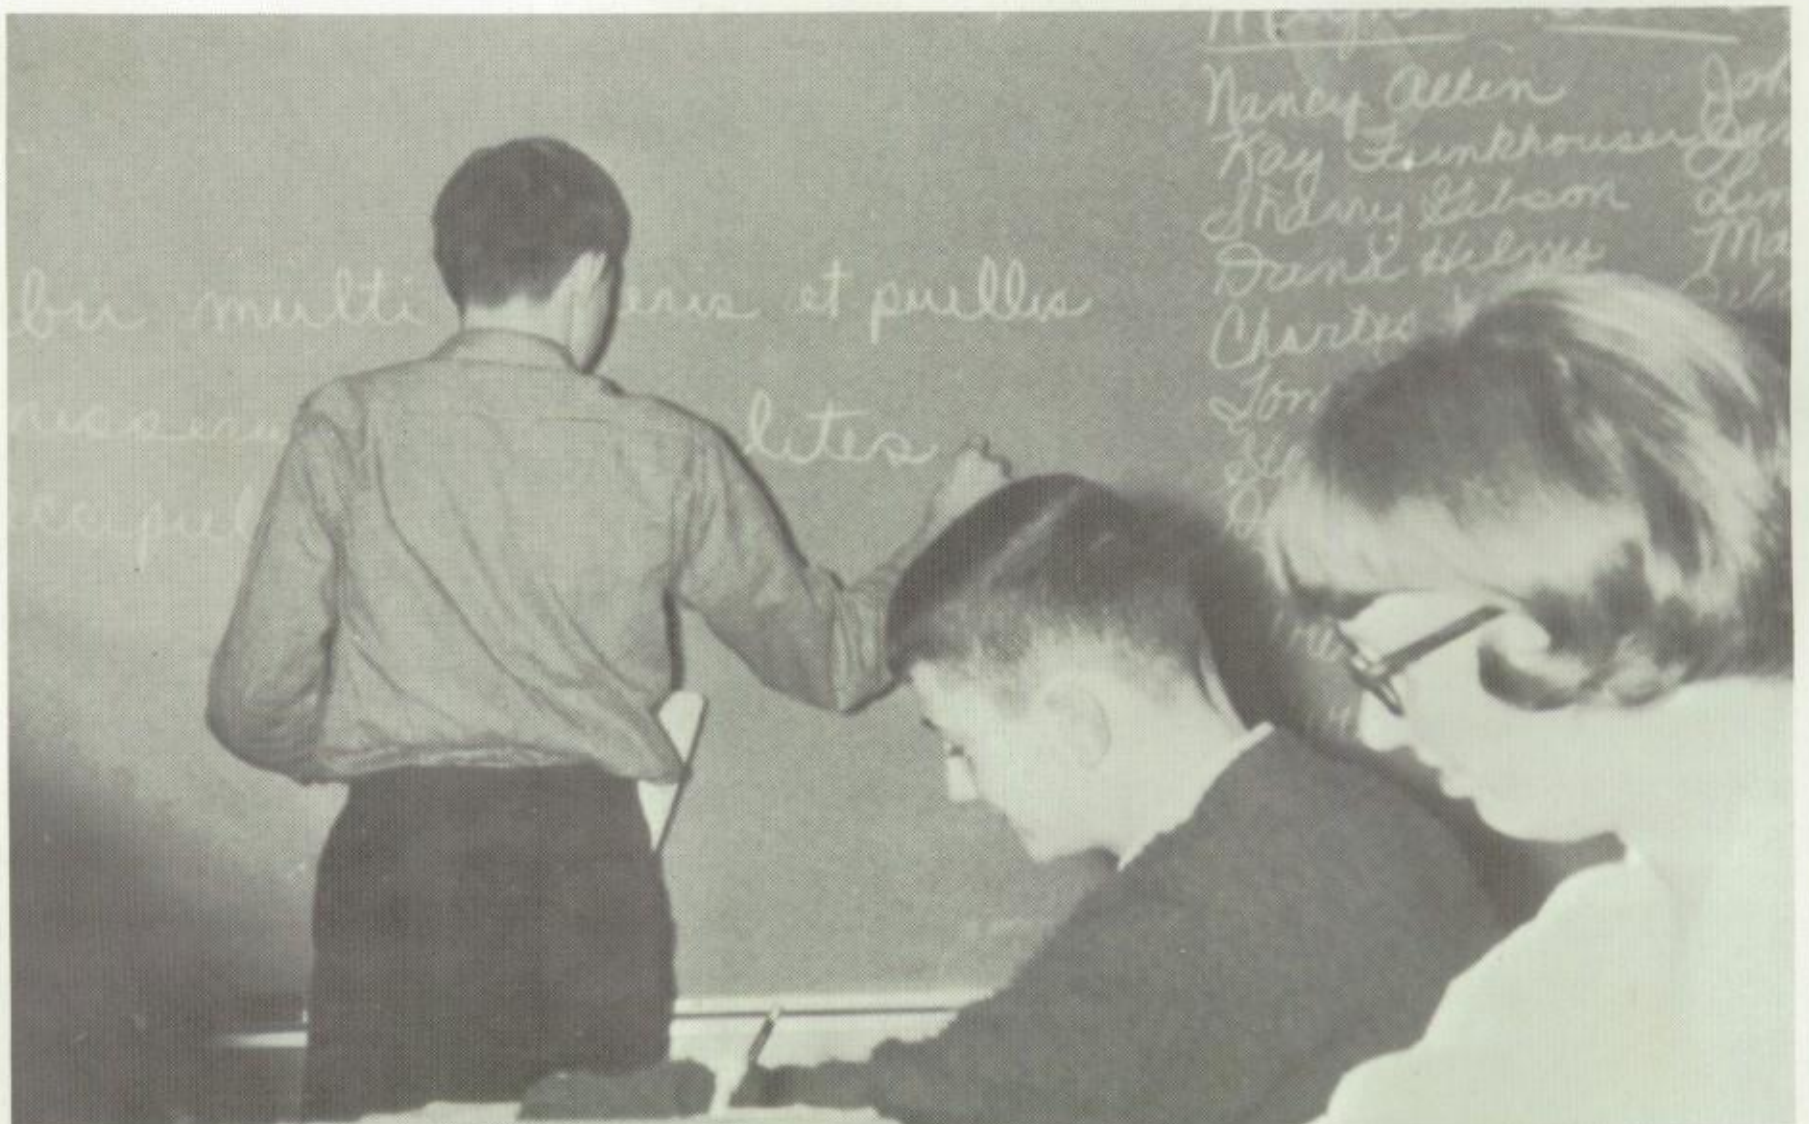

Adult agriculture class, taught by Steve Mills, entailed study on farm management.

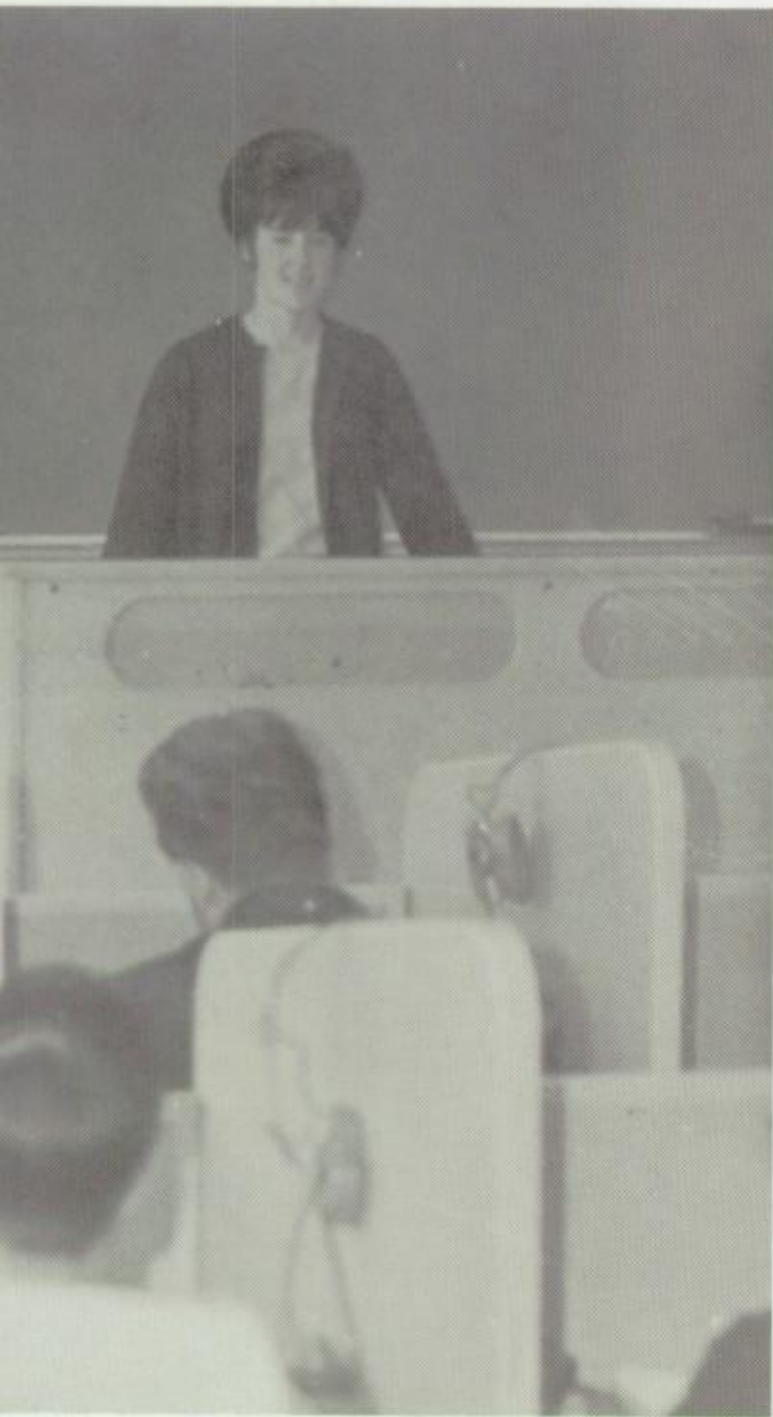

Latin and French Classes Provide for

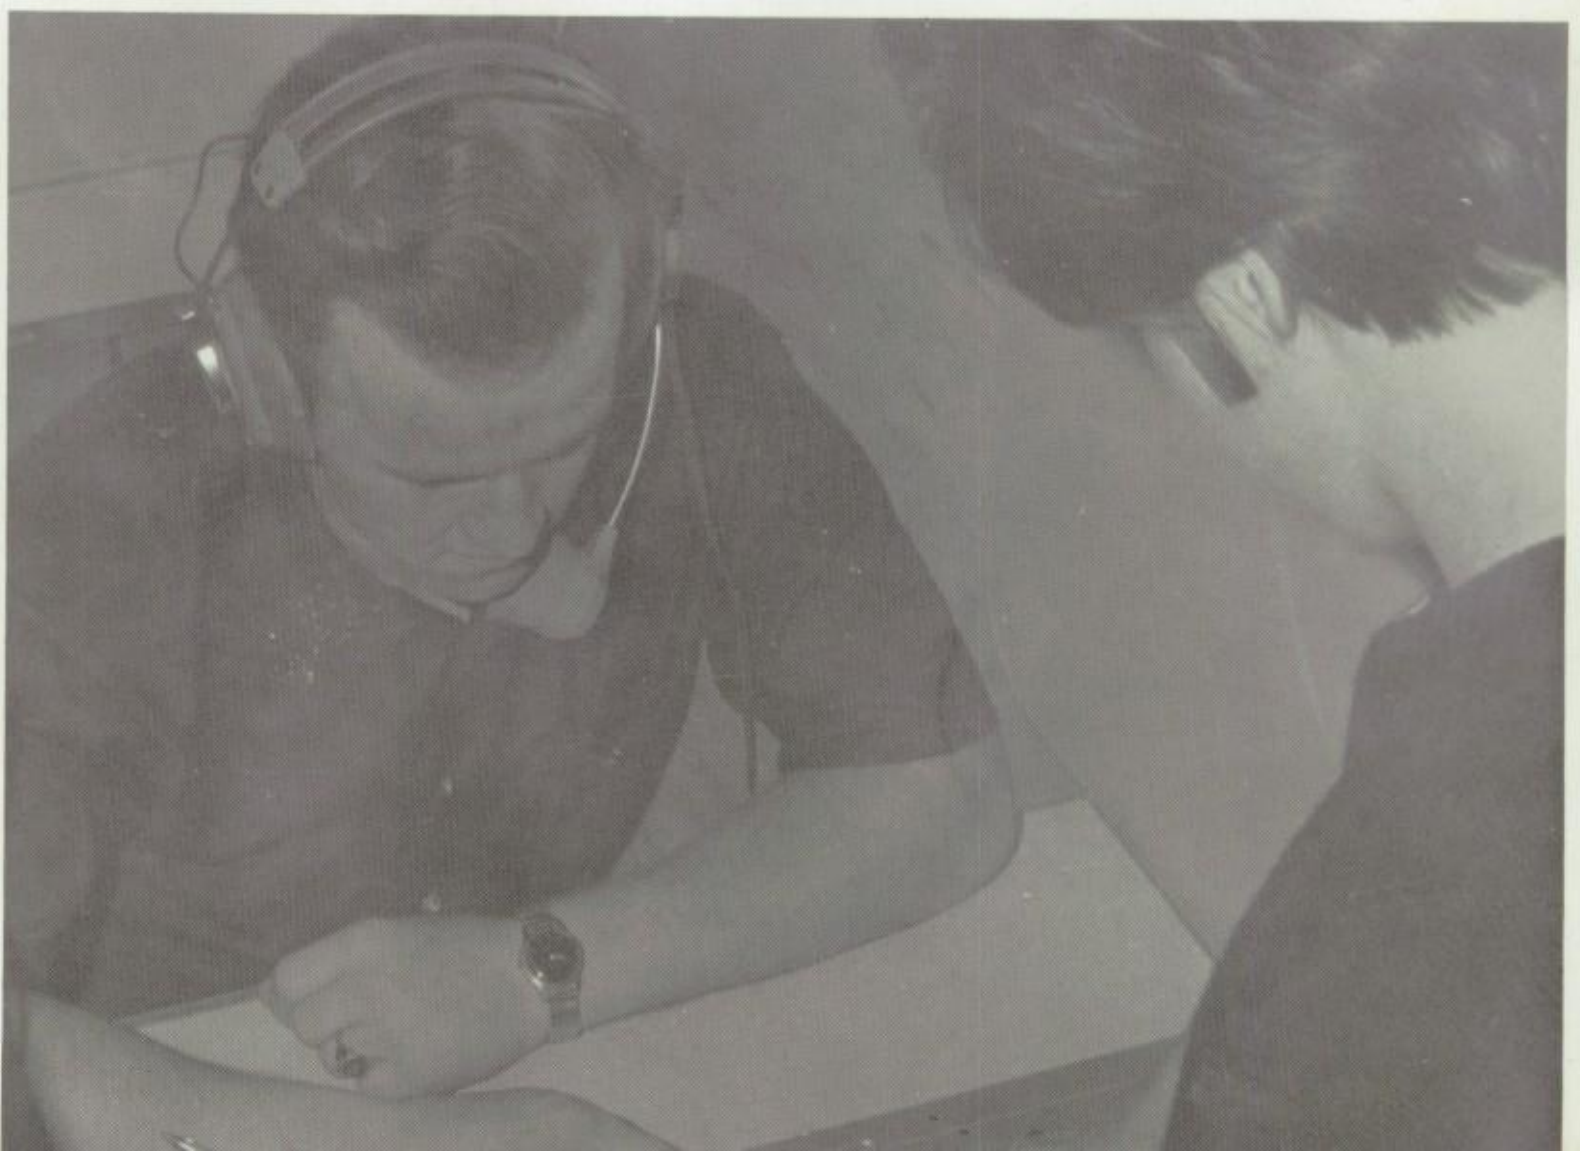

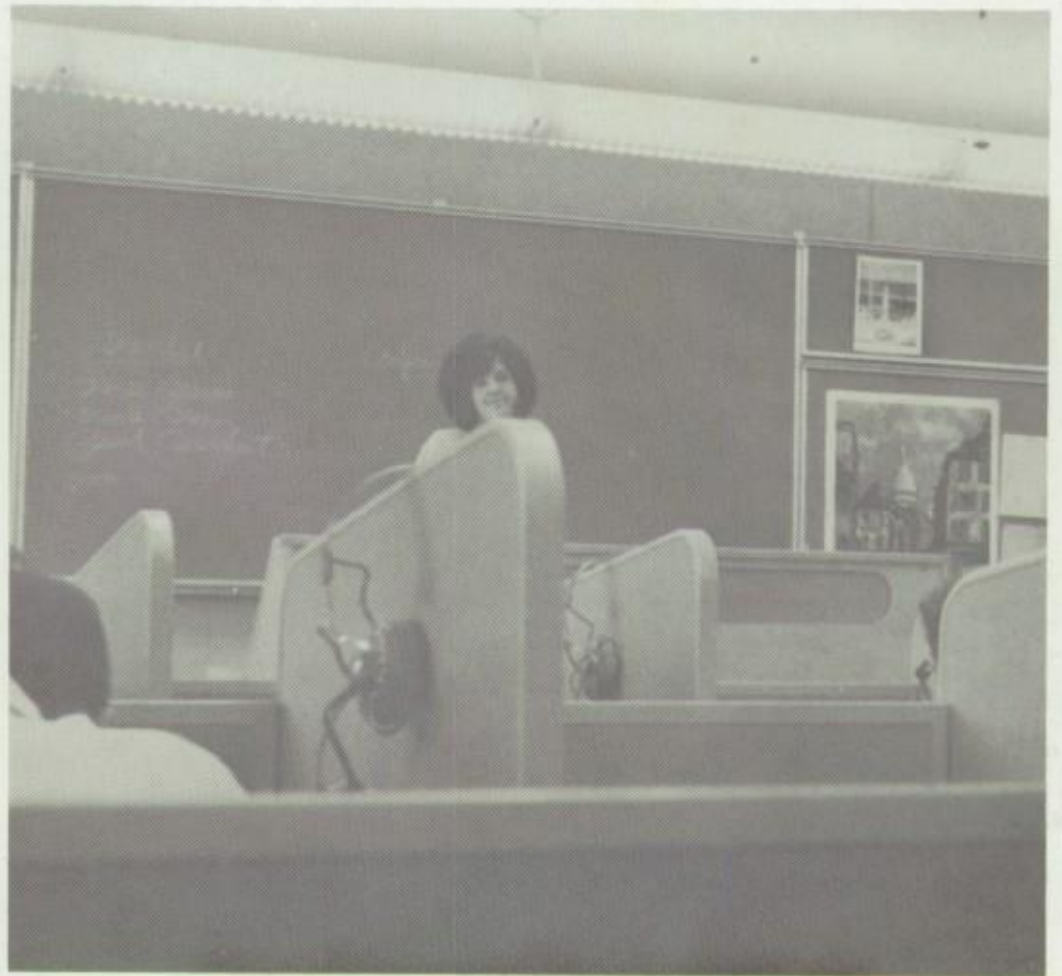

A new teacher was added to the Latin department this year. Miss Keitel helped Mrs. Douglas by taking charge of the first year classes. Working with derivatives was one of the projects of the students. Both first and second year classes were also responsible for the program at two of the Latin Club meetings this year.

Study of Foreign Languages at Carroll.

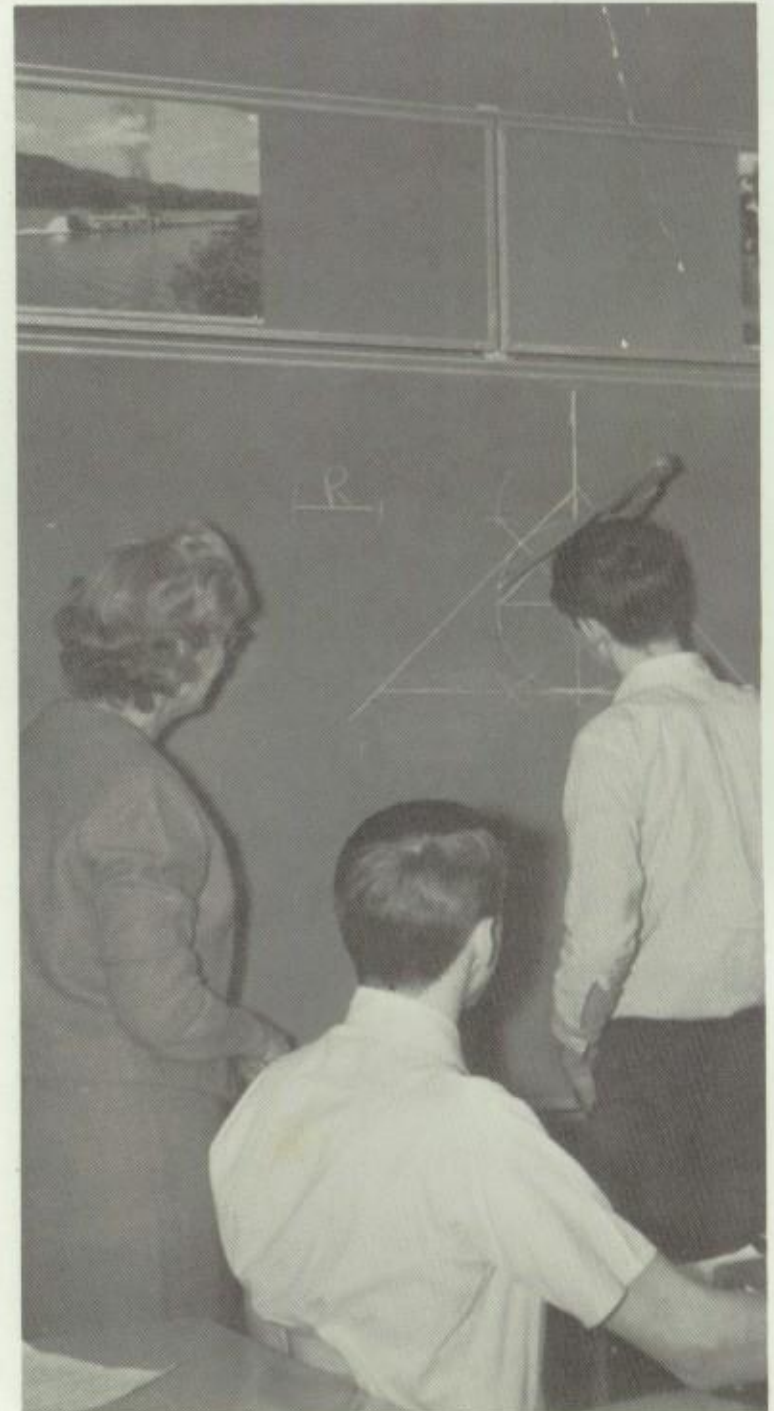

In her first year of teaching at Carroll, Mrs. Circle found the use of the micro-phones beneficial. Hearing the language spoken by natives of the country gave the students a more thorough understanding of French.

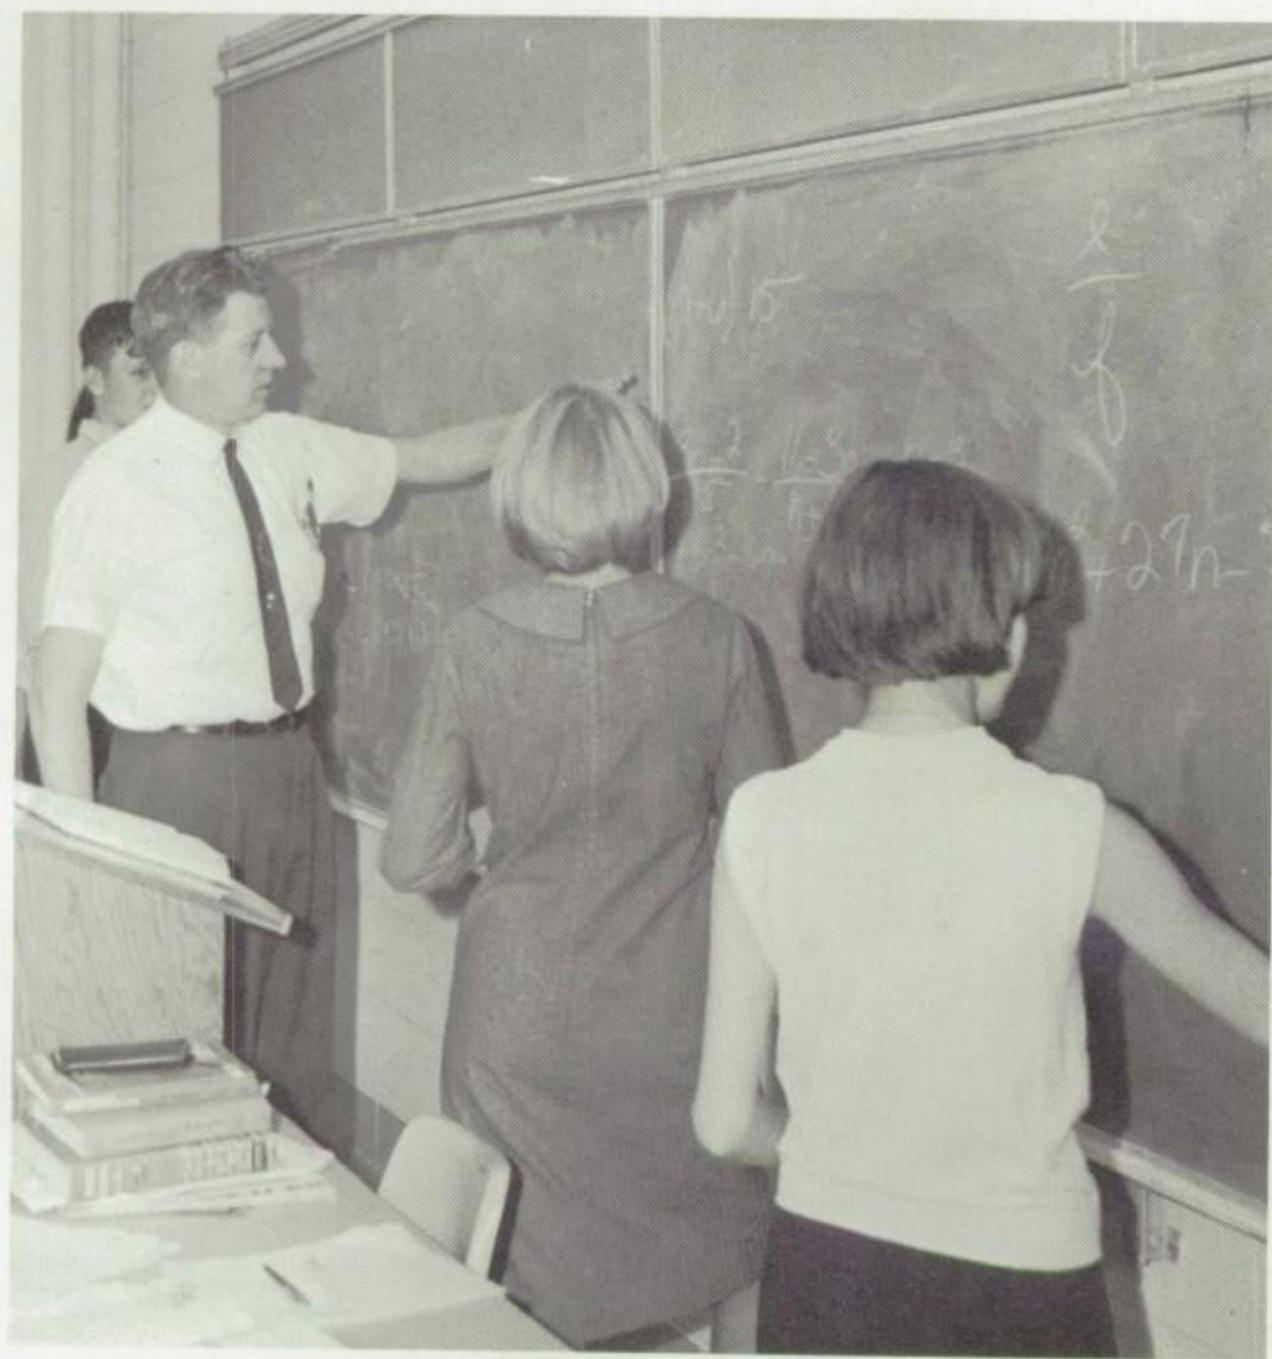

Geometry Classes Work with Many Proofs.

The study of planes and geometric figures and their relationships helps to organize students' thinking not only in math but in other areas also. Geometry students found their proofs easier to understand if they enlarged their drawings on the blackboard.

Algebra and Trig Are Thought-Provoking.

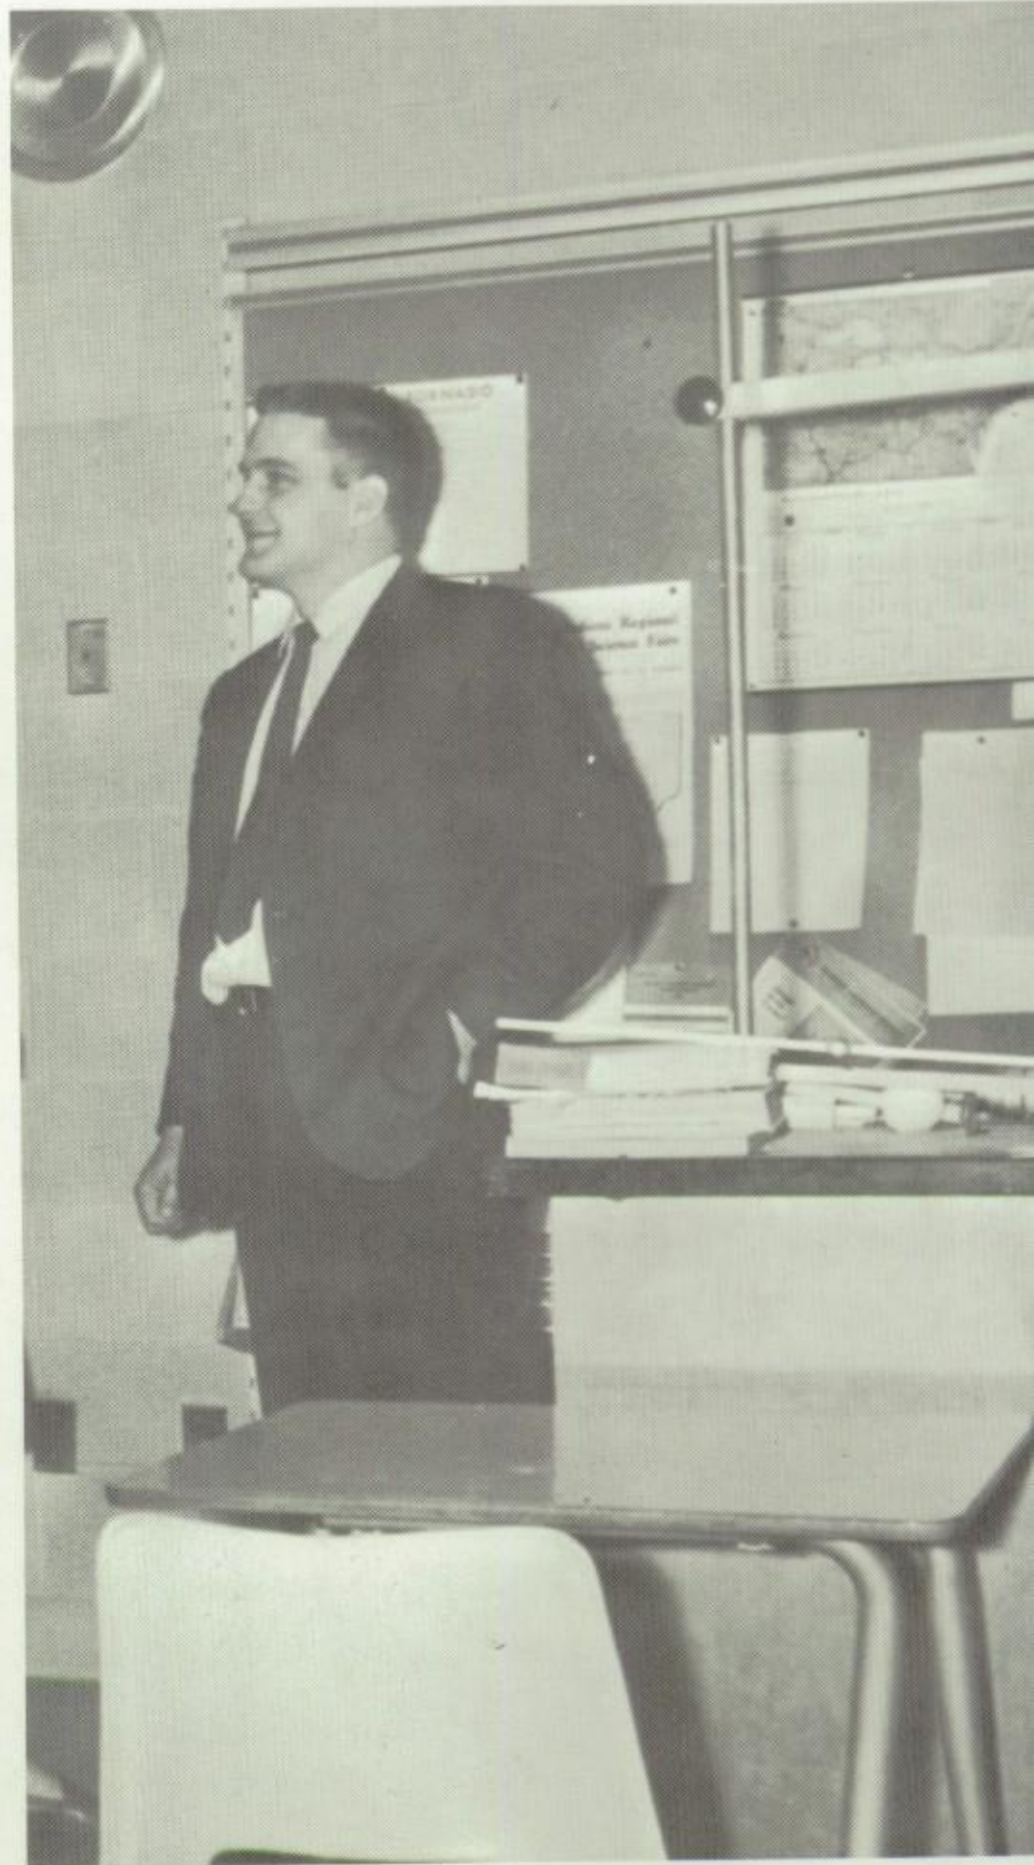

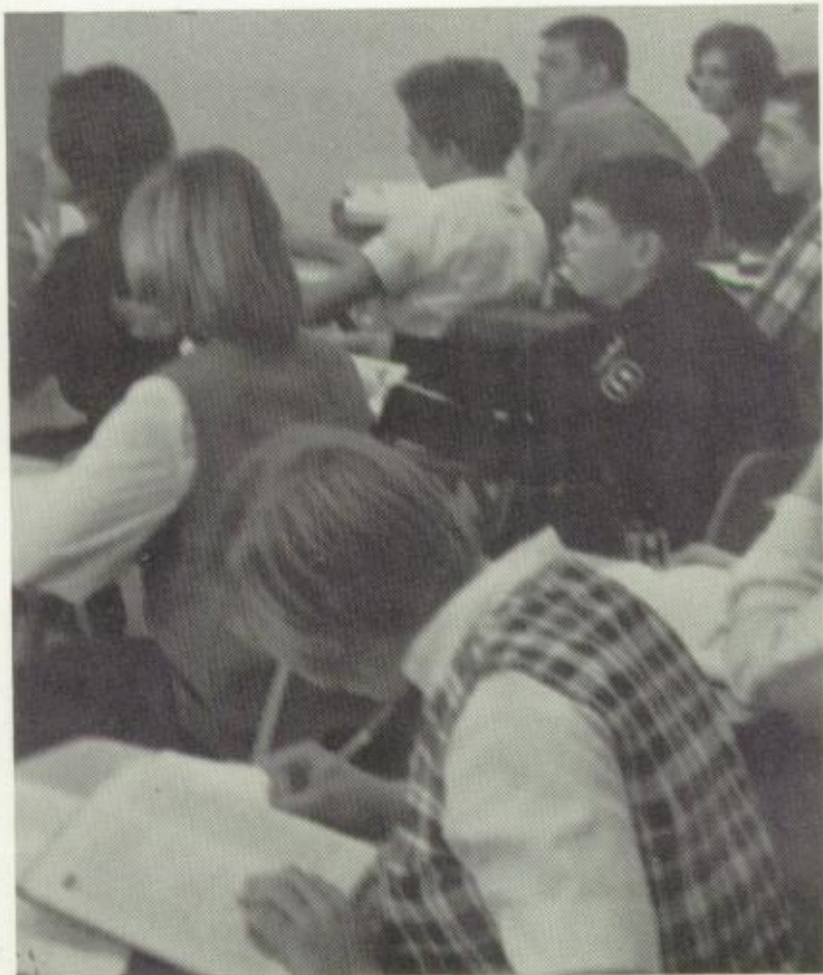

Mr. Baker kept Algebra I and II classes on their toes solving unknowns. Students need to learn their algebra well because they will need it if they continue their math with trigonometry. Trig class briefly studied calculus and probability near the end of the year. Probability caused some headaches even for Mr. Baker.

Now, which of the 5,000 ways could I seat them?

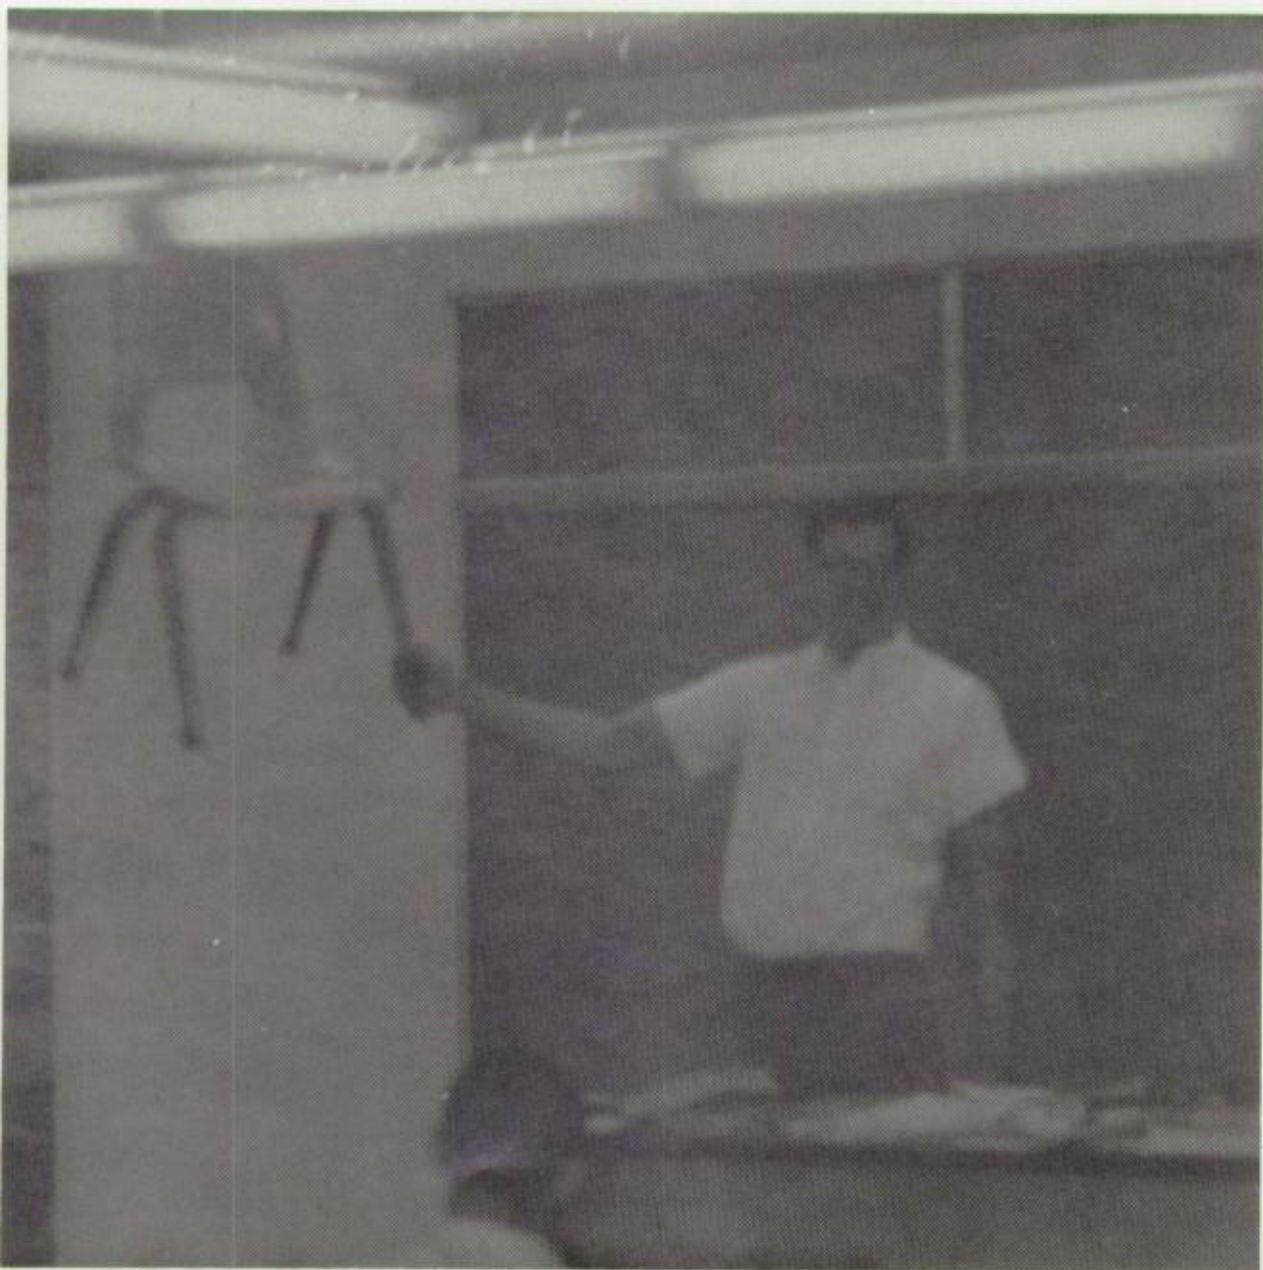

General Science Serves As an Introduction.

Advanced study in the science department stems from an interest in a specific area studied in general science. This year Tom Odden, teacher, covered several areas in the course, encouraging those who excelled in a certain phase. The students also performed some experiments, allowing them to get an idea of the work involved in higher courses.

Biology Combines Plant and Animal Study.

Dissection of fetal pigs was one of the new experiences of this year's biology classes. Using this more advanced form of animal, the students were able to compare some of the structures observed to those of the human body. Mr. Eaton also stressed the importance of maintaining a healthy body. Besides this study, the students took care of several animals which were brought in.

Some classroom techniques may seem strange, but they do prove a point.

Botany and Zoology Study Life Proccess.

Dissecting animals was an important part of zoology class. Body structures became apparent when they had to be identified on a rat. Although it wasn't always enjoyable, learning came easier through the use of real specimens.

Botany class studied the various parts of the plants and the different stages of growth. They also observed the types of flora common to a certain area. Being directed by Mr. Mills, the students carried on study of plants under microscopes.

Students Learn Through Experiments.

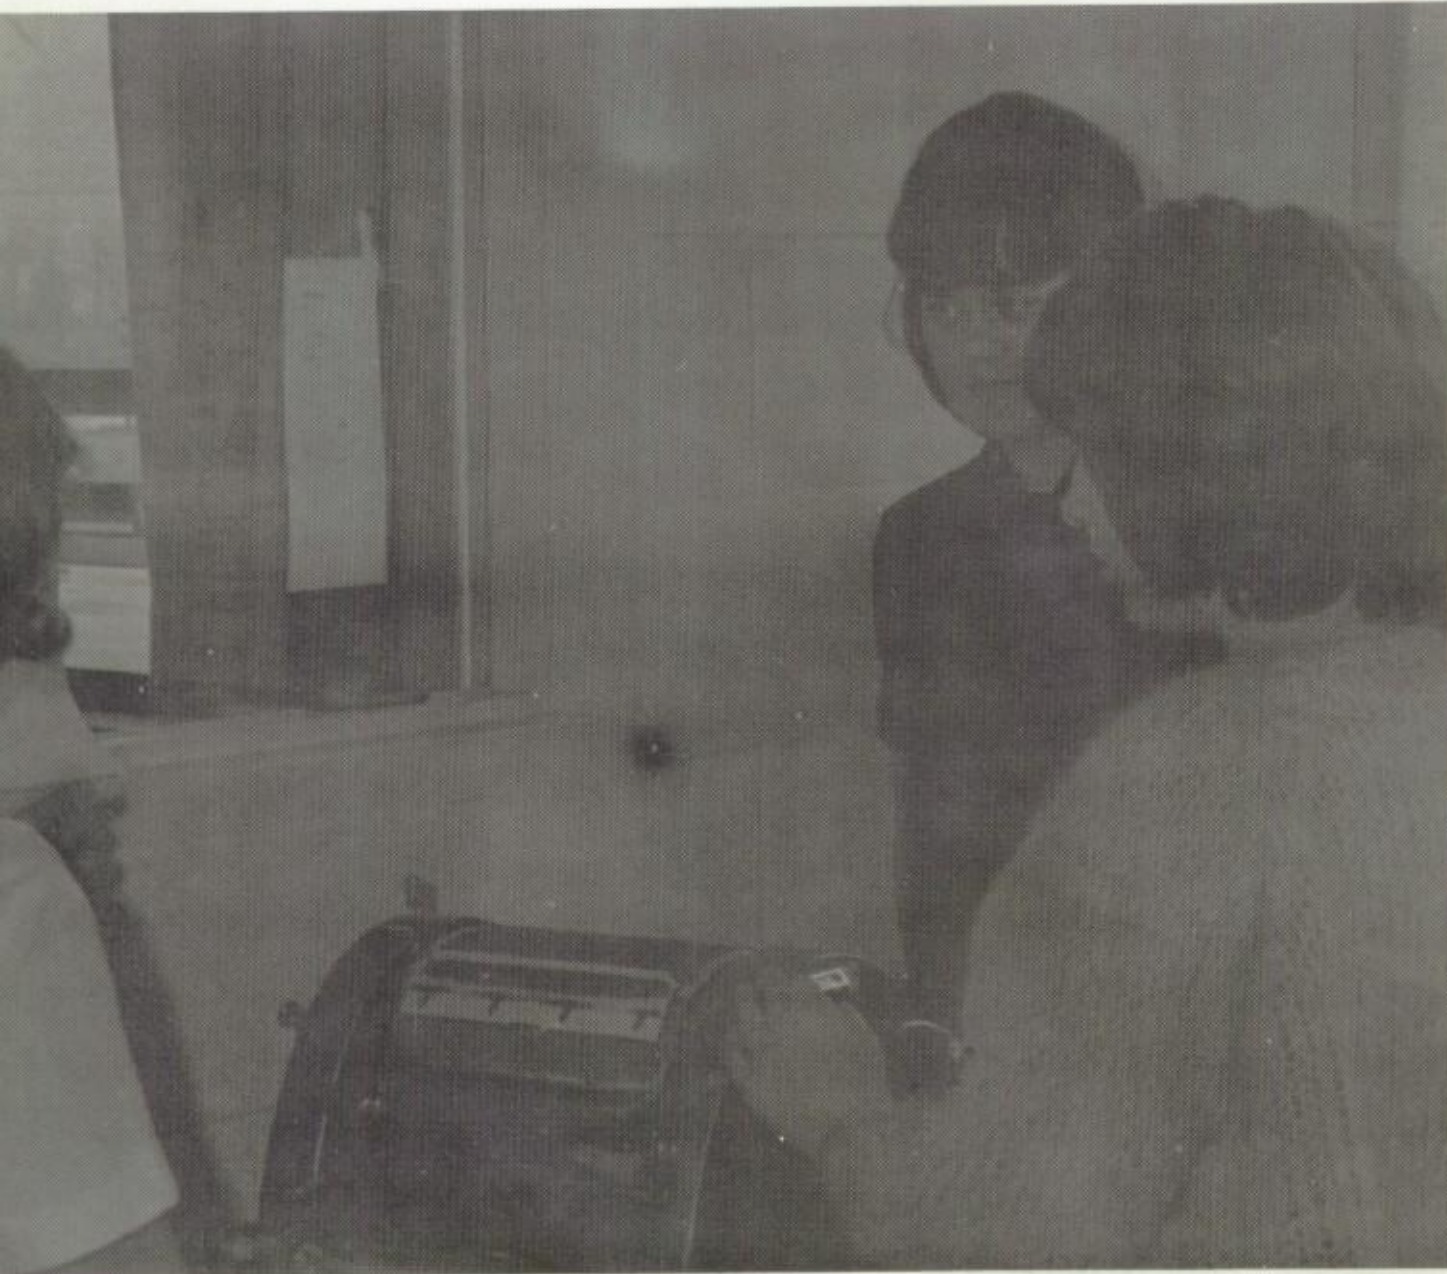

Experimentation was used quite frequently in both chemistry and physics. Mr. Rieffel's chemistry classes found the importance of accuracy in measuring and the careful use of chemicals in obtaining the proper results.

New equipment made it possible for Mr. Odden's physics class to perform several experiments. Reports were also given by students to learn of areas not covered in the book.

Business Courses Offer a Wide

Bookkeeping classes were kept busy working on practice sets, to gain experience in keeping records for a small business. Mr. Jones directed the students in the many transactions they recorded.

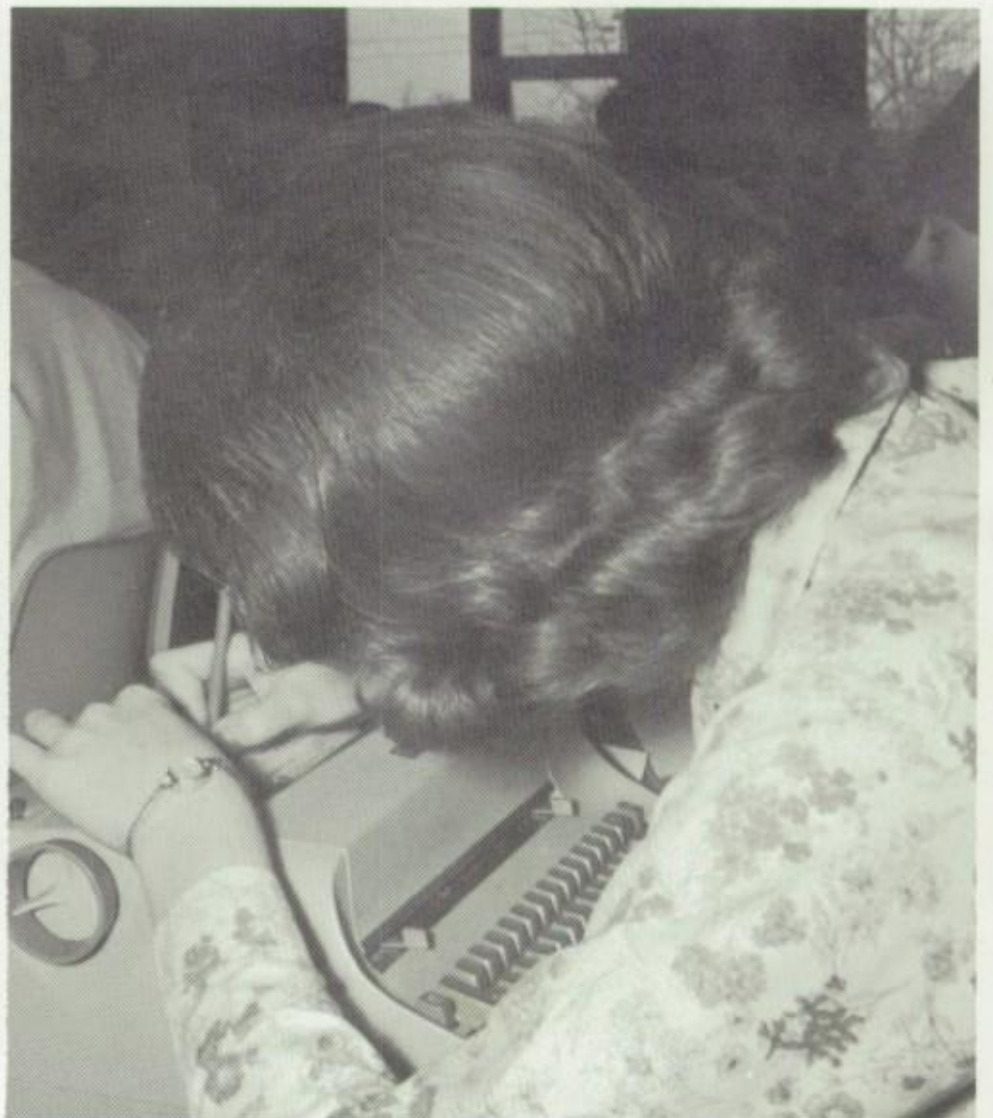

The office practice class took charge of publication of the school paper this year. Aside from this and their regular class study, they took a trip to Purdue University to observe new types of equipment coming into use.

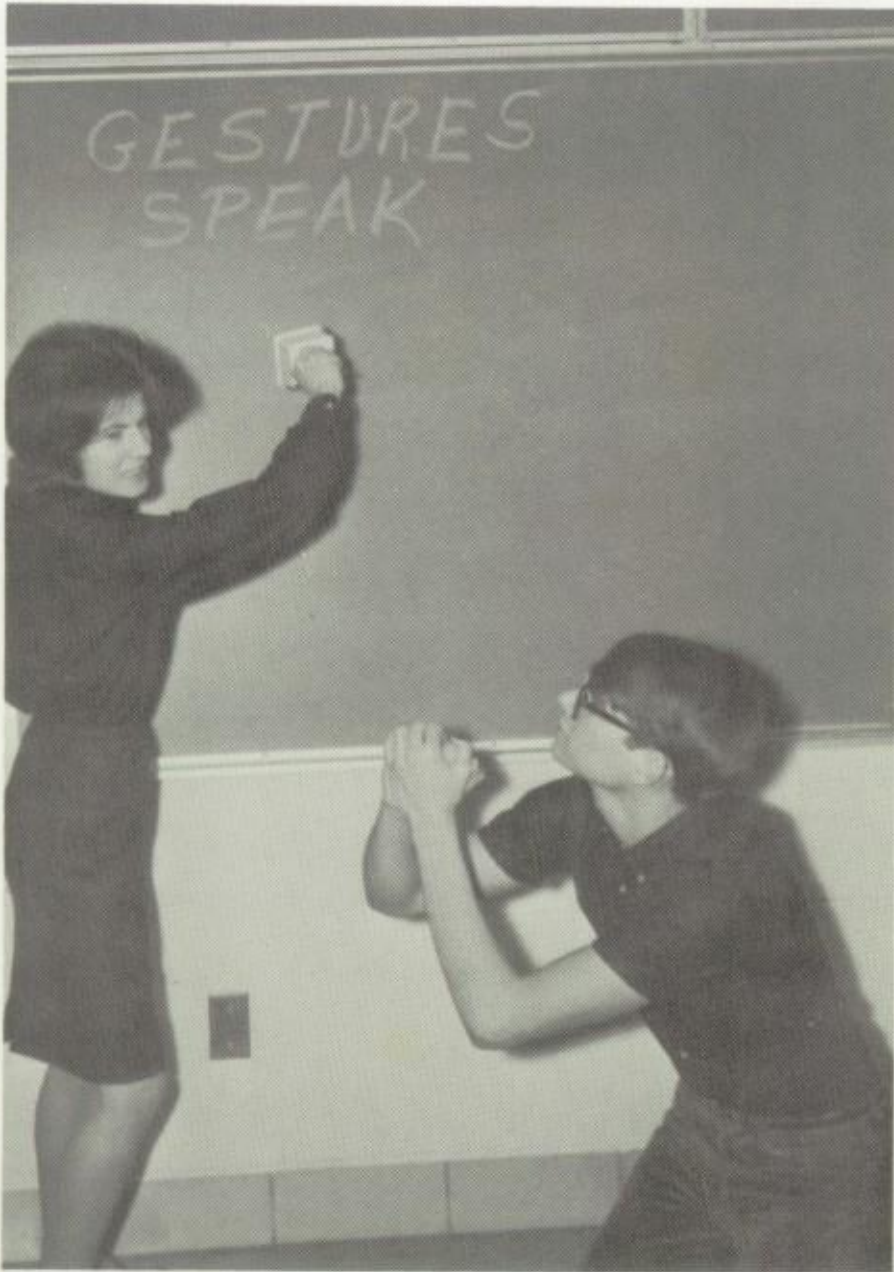

Field of Study for Several Students.

Timed writings became routine in Mr. Jones' typing classes, and students found they soon became proficient in not only speed, but accuracy. Manuscript typing was a problem to many, as two carbon copies were made. This presented quite a burden when it came to erasing mistakes. Composition of letters and practical use of other typing skills were studied in more advanced courses.

Students Practice Speaking and Writing.

Second-year speech class experimented with dramatic readings, original oratories, short stories and excerpts from plays. At left, Sheryl Allen and Bill Koup show the importance of gestures in expression.

Journalism class gained experience in interviewing and writing reviews, critiques and various types of news stories. The class was in charge of compiling news for the school newspaper the fifth six weeks. A special feature was an advice column by a mysterious "Cousin Carroll."

Speech and Hearing Aids Students

The school offers speech and hearing to students with speech or hearing defects. The department helps to find and correct these defects. If these problems can be overcome it will lead to a better understanding of school work to these students.

Mrs. Stamper, teacher, is shown instructing the students. She helps them to combat their problems through the use of special equipment. They also learn through various games which they enjoy while overcoming their problems.

Hearing is very important in understanding your teacher. Each student was benefited by having a hearing test.

Mirrors were put to use so the students could see how their words were formed.

Concert Band Adds to School Life

The concert band added many new things to the music department.

This was the first year the music department could boast pom pom girls. These girls added a lot to the performances given by the band. Also added to the department were a huge drum and a band banner.

The band gave many skits. At one basketball game the band arranged for Batman and Robin to appear. They were just in time to foul the plans of the Penguin and his gang.

The Hobo Prom was an activity sponsored by the band. The proper attire for the evening included old shoes, clothes, and hats. The King and Queen, Gary Michael and Jane Wilson, were chosen for their original costumes.

Chorus Members Practice for Concerts

The chorus found that "practice makes perfect". They spent some time each day rehearsing under the guidance of Mr. Parante.

The chorus not only entertained those at home but they traveled with the band and participated in many programs.

Featured in the lower picture is Brenda Mullendore, drum major. In the background is the new band banner.

Home Ec. Offers Valuable Experience.

Mrs. Milner's demonstrations provided various dishes for her girls to taste.

Home economics classes offer valuable experiences for girls who want to become good homemakers. Freshmen's main activity of the year was working on color, line and design. Sophomores studied about and learned how to cook the various cuts of meats, and juniors studied child care. As a part of their study, juniors invited small children to come to Carroll for play sessions. Senior girls worked extensively with sewing and had a limited amount of cooking the first of the year.

Art Students Develop Individual Styles.

First period Art Class gained insight into space by designing freeforms from pieces of Balsa Wood.

Home Ec. girls learned basics of art in working with display cases.

Oil painting was one of the highlights of the second period art class this year. Still life drawings, figure studies, printing painting, and sculpturing were just a few of the areas covered for various class projects. Many students developed their own skills by making posters signs, displays, and backdrops for the school. In the spring the students had a chance to display their year's work along with the elementary and PSI IOTA XI County Art Show.

Driver Education Teaches Safety.

Reaction from the accelerator to the brake could mean the difference between life and death.

Driver education instructs students on the proper way to drive, safety precautions and some internal workings of the car. This course is valuable because the student is given practical experience with the supervision of an instructor. Films throughout the year helped to make the students more conscientious about their driving. Late in the year a car safety demonstration was given for the benefit of regular driver education students or any other student interested.

This car is a familiar one in school sessions as well as the summer.

Physical Ed. and Health Promote Hygiene.

Physical education and health classes form an important part of a student's education. Fit bodies and fit minds go together. These classes inform students on how and why to be healthy and give encouragement and practice in carrying out what they've learned.

Shop Boys Learn from Special Projects.

Shop boys gained experience in working with different types of machinery. Students learned that welding takes skill and patience. Individual projects gave the boys a chance to make what they wanted to, while group projects developed co-operation. Making and painting hurdles for the track team was a joint effort this year.

Drafting and Printing Demand Exactness.

In drafting classes the basics of architecture were taught to the boys. They had to design and sketch different kinds of buildings, making sure they effectively used the space and safety devices.

Mr. Peterson not only had duties in drafting, but he also taught students how to set up type and run the printing presses.

Having secret peanut pals was a new project. The girls, who put presents in their pals' lockers when they weren't looking, revealed their identity at a special party. Another project was a girls' basketball game. Ideal ladies were chosen, and a tea was held in April. Senior members were guests at a banquet in May and were given gifts. Sunshine girls represented the Carroll society at district and state conventions.

Several service projects were also undertaken. The girls helped with the Mothers' March and donated money to the Riley Fund. They also served coffee to teachers on grading day at the end of the first semester.

The Hi-Y was the co-sponsor of the Sweetheart Dance held on Valentines Day and the annual semi-formal dance given last fall. At Christmas time, as in the past, they gave Christmas baskets to the needy people in the community. The Father and Son Banquet was the scene of inducting the new 1965-66 Hi-Y members. Reverend Frank Guyatt showed films of the 1964 Tokyo Olympics.

Mr. Draffen is speaking at the Father and Son Banquet while new initiates listen with interest.

Students Work in Other Musical Groups

Swing Band unlike the other two groups, is not a new performing group. This group is made up of volunteers from the band. Groups such as this are now part of many school's curriculum listed as "Stage Band." They play various types of music from old standards, to dance band.

This is a new group to Carroll High this year made up of band students. They usually play German Polkas and dress in a comical fashion thus deriving the name "Nut Band."

This vocal ensemble, Swing Chorus, is also new to the Music Department. Students for this group were auditioned from the Concert Choir. Their performance consists of Pop Tunes and swinging vocal arrangements.

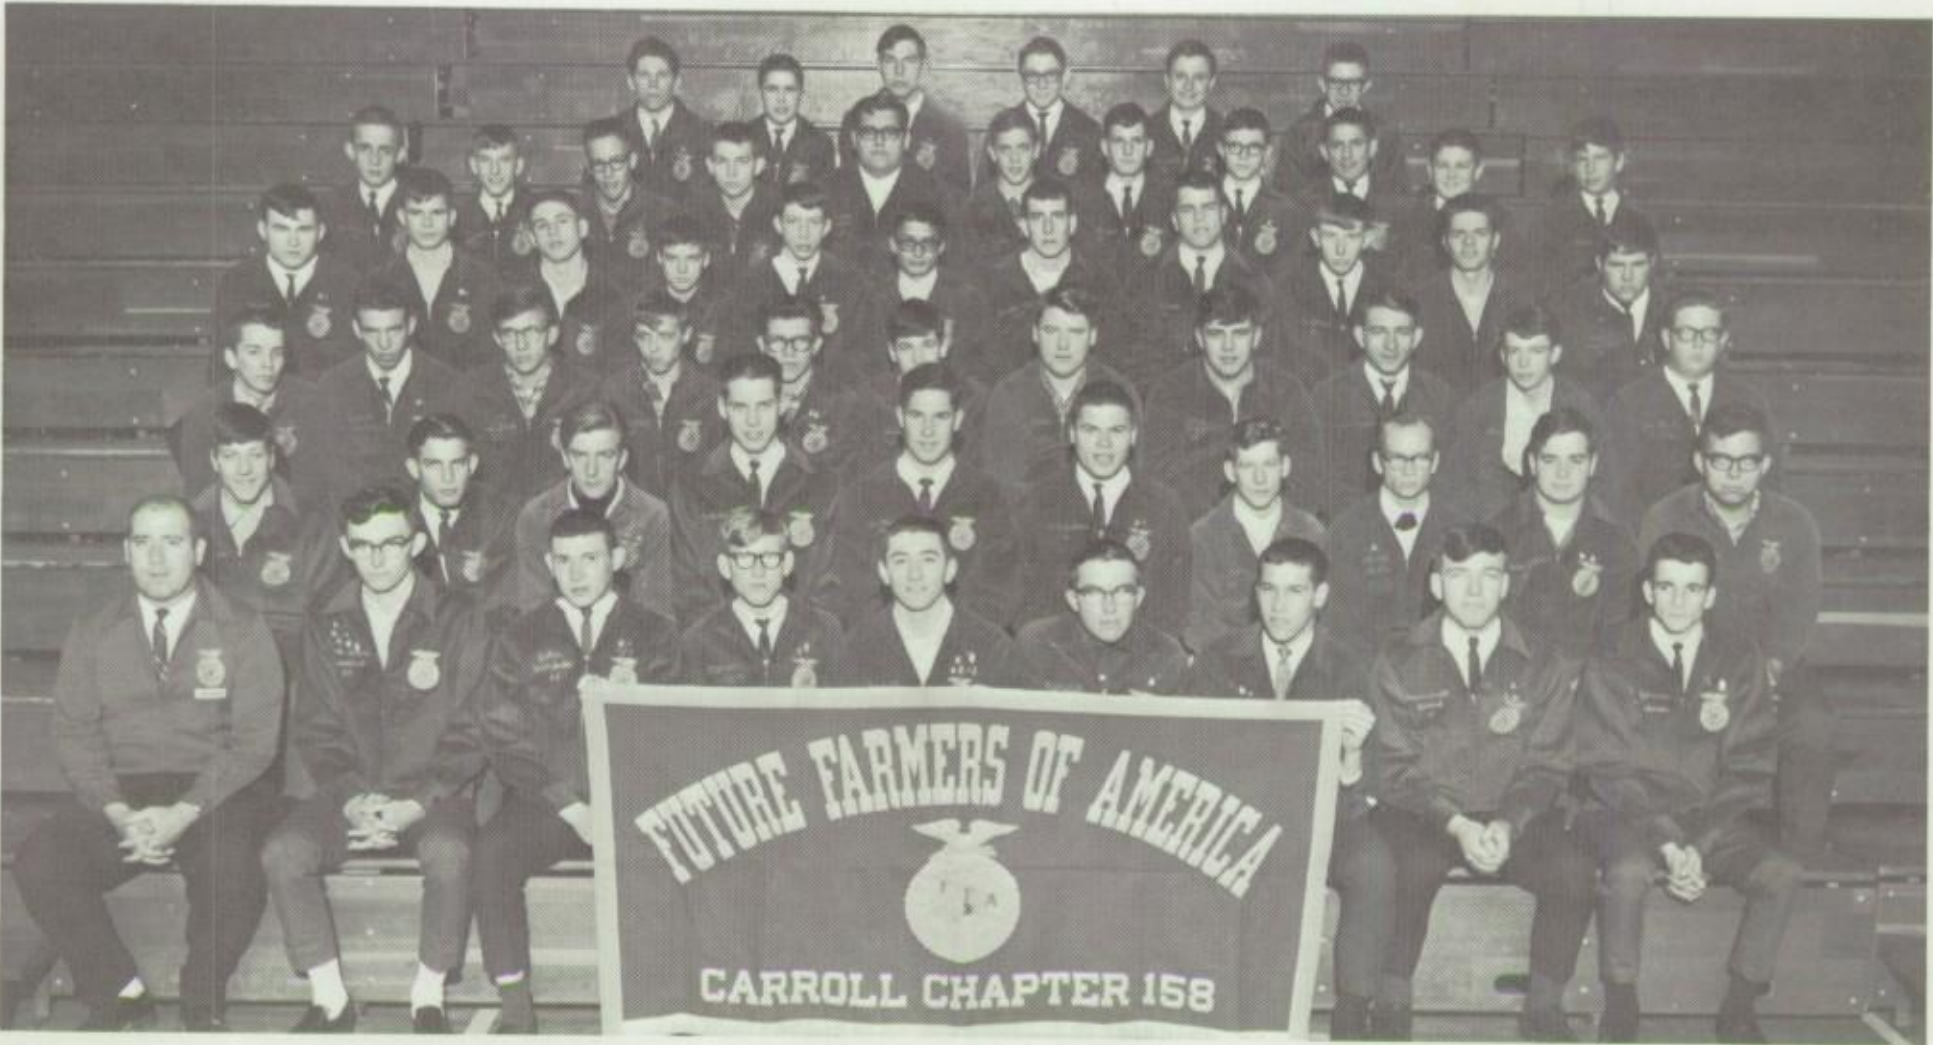

Home Ec. Club Hosts Guest Speakers.

Home Ec. Club meetings had several special features this year. Guest speakers were Mrs. Bruce Meyer, who gave a talk on dental care, an administrator of the Logansport State Hospital, and a panel of teachers who talked on dating and marriage. Many club members modeled in the Home Ec. Style Show, "Dreams That Dazzel Daisies." A dance, "St. Patrick's Promenade", was sponsored by Home Ec. Club and F.F.A. in March. Enthusiasm for football has been mounting each year as spectators increase their understanding of this sport. Two new features were added to the football field this year. New lights enabled the boys to play night games, and new bleachers gave spectators more convenience in seeing and cheering their team. With support from the spectators and encouragement from boys on the bench, the players kept up their spirit throughout the games. Members of the football squad along with their coach, Jir. Puett, are anxious to meet the challenge of next year's season.

Carroll Cougars Aroused School Pride

The Cougars, although they did not have a winning season, were the pride of the Carroll students this year.

This was the first year for the Cougars under the direction of Coach Day. But the boys and he worked enthusiastically together to put forth their best.

Tom Myer, a junior member of the team, brought state wide recognition to the Carroll Cougars. At one time during the season he hit forty-one straight free throws. The team and students were especially proud when he was named to the Hoosier Conference All Stars.

Tension! Excitement! Exhaustion! These were the feelings of the Carroll swimmers before, during, and after a swimming meet. Coach Ron Eaton stressed fast starts, precision, concentration, speed, and endurance as necessary abilities for good competition. The boys practiced hard this year and increased their wins over last year.

The Carroll track team had a headlining season and the members worked hard to have a good one.

Paul Sibray, a senior member, brought honors to the team by a good performance in the regional which qualified him for the sectional at Fort Wayne. There Paul received a fourth place in the half-mile.

Hard Work, Long Hours, and Endurance.

Cross country is a very demanding sport. Team members put in long hours of practice before meets. Even the weather was no hindrance. During bad weather boys practiced by running around the halls of school. Boys developed strong loyalty to their team, giving every ounce of effort to push forward a victory.

Even though the classes are out, one sport carries on through the summer. This sport is baseball. Coach Fraley's team began practice before the school year ended for preparation to meet their opponents. Enthusiasm for the sport was shown by the many shouts heard on the field. At the lower right Tony Smith is pictured awaiting the pitch.

Cheerblock and Cheerleaders Back Team.

Carroll High School had cheerleaders and a cheerblock to be proud of this year. Through cooperation and practice, they presented yells that helped to build school spirit and back the team. Cheerleaders Toni Short, Rita Sheagley, Gaye Martin and Pam Hutson worked hard preparing posters to create extra enthusiasm for the games.

C-Club, Intramural Stress Sportsmanship.

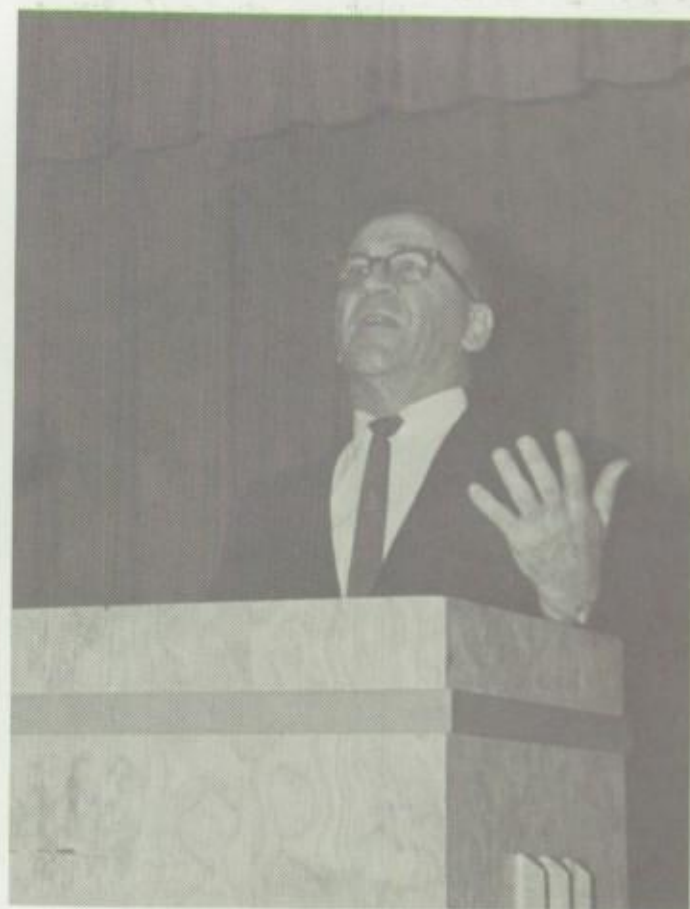

C-Club members adapted a code of ethics this year for all present and future members to follow. Officers were J. Forgey, president; Paul Sibray, vice president; S. Jackson, secretary; M. McDowell, treasurer; J. Milner, sergeant-at-arms; and T. Bixler, student council representative. Ron Eaton, Bob Fraley and Dean Day were sponsors.

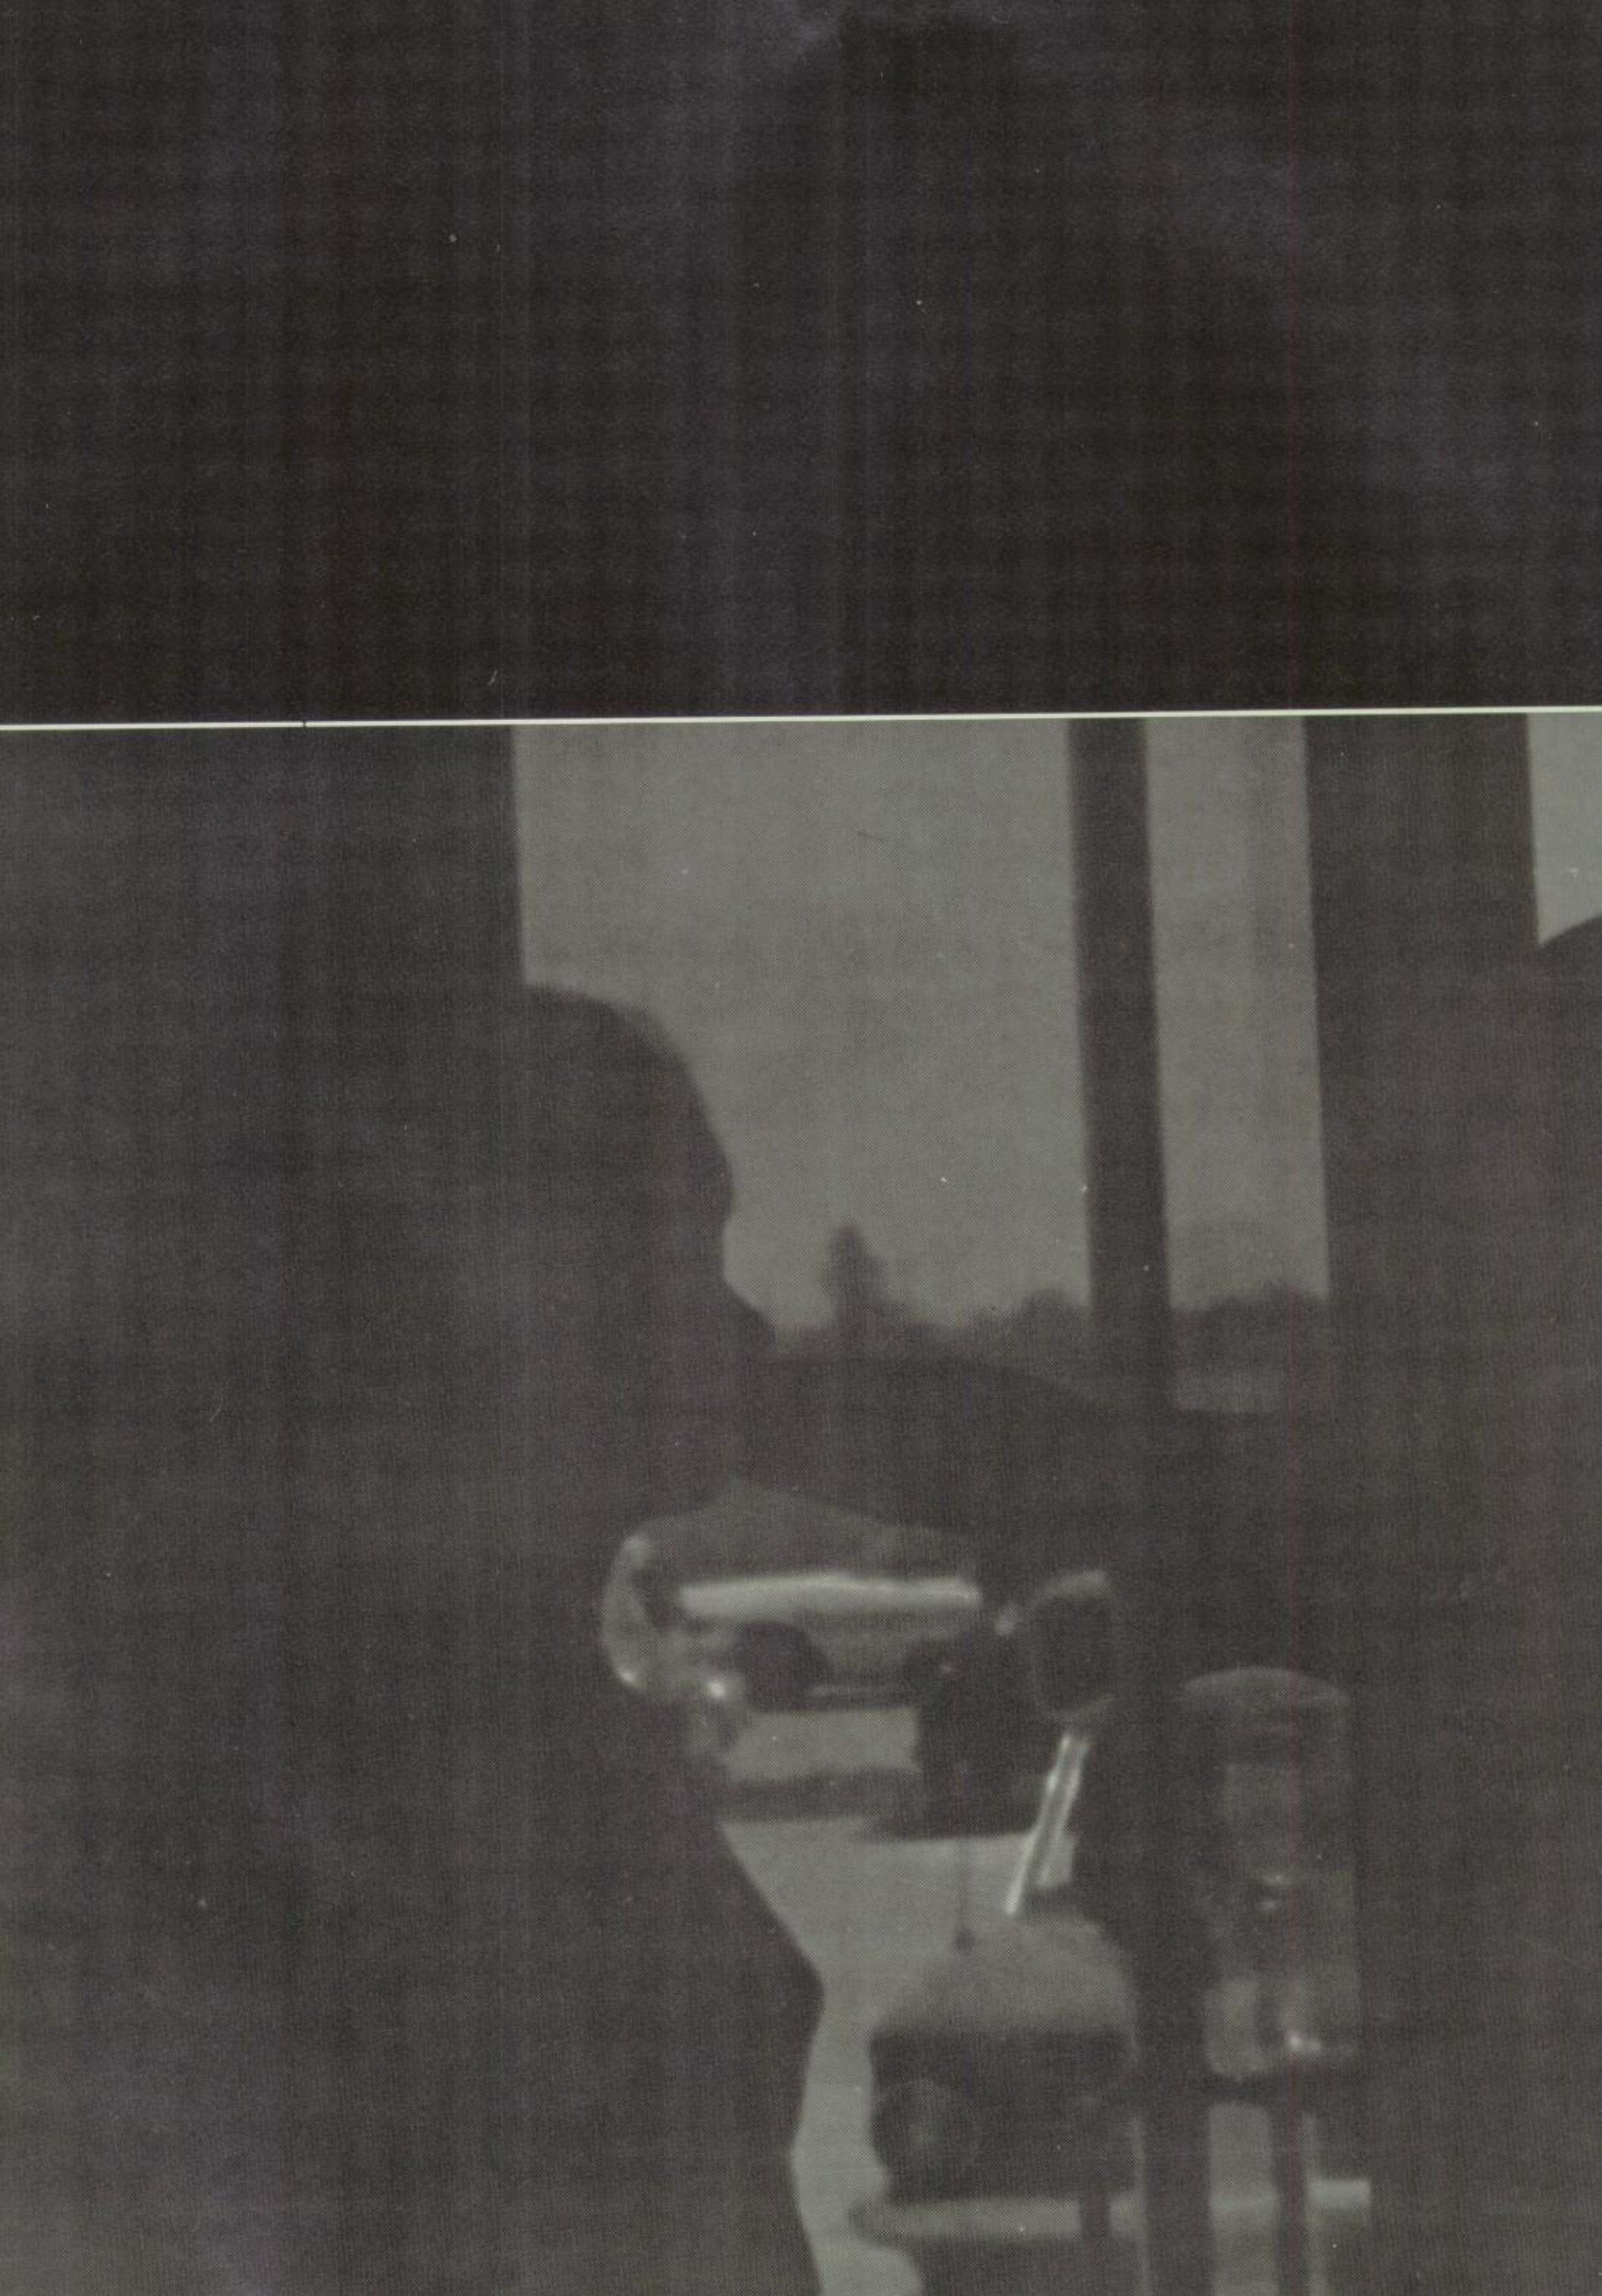

Each year intramural presents a sportsmanship trophy. This year's winner, Steve Jackson, received this honor at a basketball game between the Intramural All-Stars and the "Faculty Foxes." Victory went to the faculty.

Athletic Boosters Contribute to Sports.

Athletic Boosters are an asset to sports at Carroll. This year they purchased a cougar mascot, football bleachers, lights and other sports equipment. Team members and cheerleaders representing the various sports were honored at the Athletic Banquet in the spring. Howard Sharp was guest speaker.

Cooks, Custodians, and Bus Drivers

Mr. & Mrs. Yoder kept our school shining and are always on hand when needed.

Mr. Hicks relieved Mr. Mitchell for a long night ahead keeping watch in the school.

Compliments on the appearance of Carroll High School are results of the work done by the custodians. Many hours were spent in caring for school equipment. Along with caring for the school, they took charge of setting up for various meetings to be held.

Mr. King was quick to repair damages done to the school.

Serve the School.

Preparing meals for over five hundred people, to be ready in three shifts, is quite an undertaking. The cooks, who were responsible for doing this, worked well under the direction of Mrs. Mildred Hausenfluck. Serving the students and faculty members in a matter of very few minutes took the cooperation of each one. Those pictured at the left are Donnabelle Myer, Doris Sheagley, Winifred Landes, Dorothy Fisher, Jean Kingery, JoAnn Segraves, and Mildred Hausenfluck.

Bus drivers also served the students in transporting them to and from school. Patience and nerves of steel were two of the qualifications for this job, for there were several problems encountered. Driving this year and pictured below were B. Stephens, J. Seward, W. Hicks, V. Hausenfluck, J. Downham, V. Frantz, D. Duff, M. Sanderson, C. Rhine, J. Loman, D. Ross, M. Ayres, G. Ehrman, P. Achor, J. Neptune.

Students in the Special Education Class are happy to be situated in the new self-contained classroom this year. Work is done in the basics of reading, writing, and mathematics. The students also study some about the work of others in the community, state and in other communities.

Basic skills are developed by special teachers in music and physical therapy to aid in a richer life for the students. Encouragement is given to help development in vocational and recreational skills.

These activities are carried out with the aim of helping the students grow stronger physically, mentally, and socially.

Students are interested in learning about the world around them. Some of the different areas of study and recreation are shown on the blackboard.
